Firms lower tariffs for Alaska pipeline oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil companies began filing reduced tariffs with the Interstate Commerce Commission on Saturday in preparation for shipping the first tanker loads of oil brought through the Alaska pipeline.

"It looks like all systems are go for the trans-Alaska oil," said Daniel O'Neal, chairman of the ICC.

"The oil is in Valdez, ready to be loaded on tankers, the companies are cooperating with ICC in filing tariffs, and the last legal barrier to the shipment of north slope oil to the lower eight states has apparently been cleared."

The ICC had rejected the earlier tariffs as being excessive and a federal court in New Orleans on Friday upheld the commission's action.

The tariffs are the amount the oil companies can charge for transporting the oil and affects the amount of taxes which can be charged by the State of Alaska.

An ICC spokesman said Atlantic Richfield (ARCO) filed a tariff Saturday of $4.91 a barrel, Exxon $5.10, British Petroleum $4.68, Union Alaska $4.89 and Sohio $4.70. He said they all were at the ceiling level set by the ICC earlier.

First ship ready to take on trans-Alaska oil

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — Heavy with ballast that will soon be replaced by Alaskan crude oil, the 120,000-ton tanker ARCO Juneau was eased to her berth at this pipeline terminal Saturday by a gaggle of tugboats.

The arrival of the supertanker brought the flow of oil from Alaska's Prudhoe Bay field a step closer to delivery to markets in the Lower 48.

The 95-foot Coast Guard cutter Bitt stood off about 300 yards from the 883-foot Juneau as the ship was secured to its loading berth at the $1-billion trans-Alaska pipeline terminal across the harbor from the city of Valdez.

The Juneau entered the harbor at 7 a.m., but a blanket of fog and drizzle obscured it from the shoreline. The tanker was just a blip on the radar screen of Coast Guardsmen guiding it in.

Gang crime threat in valley

GANGLAND SLAYING

Sheriff's homicide detectives examine the scene near Chino Airport where Arthur "Tilo" Abilez Loza was fatally shot April 14. His feet can be seen at the edge of a shallow ditch where his body was dumped. His killers remain at large, possibly in the valley.

Tentacles of Mexican Mafia, La Nuestra Familia stretch out

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of five articles reporting on activities of the Mexican Mafia and La Nuestra Familia, two violent prison gangs operating in the valley. Law enforcement authorities fear this type of violent crime may increase since California's determinate sentencing law went into effect July 1, and may result in the freeing of more gang members from behind prison bars.

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

The body of Arthur Abilez Loza, 34, Chino, was found April 14 in a ditch east of the Chino Airport. Well-aimed bullets had blown half his face away.

This grisly discovery became part of the mounting evidence that organized crime has moved into the valley under the direction of two notorious prison gangs, the Mexican Mafia and La Nuestra Familia.

According to West End sheriff's deputies, Loza's death was the result of a "contract" let by La Nuestra Familia, known as the New Family or simply NF, out of Fresno.

They said Loza had testified against another gang member at his recent narcotics trial.

Loza's death remains on the long list of yet "unsolved crimes" occurring all too frequently in the valley, and all believed connected to gangland activities.

Evidence these organized and vicious gangs are operating in the valley mounts as authorities investigate one slaying after another. They report the following incidents:

. . .The execution-style slaying of Edward Lorenzo Gonzales, 30, Mira Loma, whose body was found in a parked car in La Verne on June 19, 1976.

. . .The arrest of Marcus Robert Castaneda, 32, in downtown Ontario on Jan. 18, a man believed to be a captain in the New Family involved with at least four Northern California bank robberies.

. . .The Jan. 21 shotgun slaying of Carlos N. Rodriquez, 42, Pomona, outside his Gordon Street home.

. . .The Jan. 23 shooting of Peter Hernandez Jr., whose body was found in the front yard of his home at 350 W. 11th St., Pomona.

Other incidents include a gun confiscated from an Ontario home that investigators believe was used in an attempted murder.

Investigators also have acquired a posterboard with a long list of names and a picture of a dagger and sombrero, a symbol of the NF, and a bandana with symbols of the Mexican Mafia. The bandana was found in the Upland home of a man identified as Incarcion Segura Jr., wanted for parole violation.

'Lucky to be alive'—driver in Newhall crash-fire

Trucker in collision that ignited brush fire a Walnut man

A Walnut man said Saturday he feels "lucky to be alive" after his cargo truck collided with an oil tanker near Newhall, touching off a 350-acre brush fire.

Robert Eckles, 47, of 905 Pierre Road, credited the driver of the oil tanker for probably saving his life. "I don't really remember what happened. All of a sudden I was sitting near an ambulance."

Eckles said he was told the driver pulled him out of his rig after the collision early Saturday morning on Interstate 5. "I'd say I wouldn't be here if he hadn't pulled me out," he told a reporter from his hospital bed.

Eckles suffered a concussion and four fractured ribs in the accident and was reported in stable condition at Henry Mayo Hospital in Valencia.

Officials reported Eckles' truck collided with the tanker about 4:30 a.m. and the tanker exploded. That apparently touched off a brush fire.

The driver of the tanker truck was identified as Leroy Annias, 42, of Vallejo.

Eckles said he was "happy I wasn't killed in the damn thing."

He noted that the oil tanker was traveling in front of him on Interstate 5, and somehow the two rigs collided. "I don't know exactly how," he added. "I was told that his trailer caught the front part of my tractor as I was passing him on the highway."

Eckles was unconscious for a while, but remembers waking up and seeing the brush fire "all around me. I feel fortunate to be here."

FIERY TRUCK CRASH

The burned out remains of a large truck that was involved in a fiery crash early Saturday is shown in this picture. The crash, on Interstate 5 near Newhall, involved a food truck driven by a Walnut man and an oil tanker truck. The collision apparently touched off a brush fire, in the hill above.

New blaze rages out of control

By The Associated Press

A brush and timber fire raging out of control abruptly switched direction Saturday and started toward Saint Helena two miles west, according to the California Division of Forestry.

A CDF spokesman said no injuries were reported and no structures burned, but some homes and ranches appeared threatened.

The fire, spurred by erratic winds, had charred 500 acres near Howell Mountain by 5 p.m. as a force of firefighters from the CDF, Napa, Sonoma and Mendocino counties and the Saint Helena fire department battled the blaze.

They included six ground crews, two spotter planes, eight air tankers, two helicopters, and 29 fire engines and five bulldozers.

Winds drove the fire to within two miles of Saint Helena, CDF said. Officials could give no estimate of when the fire might be contained.

Meanwhile two wind-driven brush fires that blackened nearly 6,000 acres in fire-ravaged California appeared near containment Saturday.

Fires raced through 5,500 acres near Corona, 40 miles southeast of Los Angeles, and through 350 acres near Newhall, 40 miles north of the city.

Nearly 1,500 firefighters in Corona — some of whom had helped fight a fire that destroyed 234 expensive Santa Barbara homes earlier this week — contained about 55 per cent of the three-day-old blaze. Full containment was not expected until Sunday, said U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Debbie Gold.

The Newhall fire began when an oil tanker truck exploded after colliding with an 18-wheel cargo truck about 4 a.m. Saturday. Interstate 5 was closed until 10:30 a.m., with southbound traffic backed up for 5 miles in the early morning.

The driver of the cargo truck fractured four ribs and received a concussion, according to a hospital spokeswoman in Valencia. The other truck driver was not hurt.

About 250 fire fighters fought the Newhall blaze, which broke out in an unpopulated area on Interstate 5 north of Lake Castaic.

Gang crime threat in valley . . .

Within the last year, two inmates have been fatally stabbed as a result of gang activity at the California Institution for Men (CIM) in Chino.

In the latest murder, reported May 13, inmate William O. Gonzales, serving a one-year-to-life term for second-degree robbery, was suddenly attacked by three other inmates as he reached the exit of the Reception-Guidance Center gymnasium.

He was stabbed numerous times in the neck and back.

While this slaying is still under investigation, Chino police and prison authorities believe that Gonzales was a member of the NF and may have been attacked by other inmates fulfilling a "hit contract" from the Mexican Mafia.

Questioned in the slaying were two inmates of Latin descent and one anglo-saxon prisoner. The two Latin prisoners are suspected of being members of the Mafia while the third inmate is suspected of belonging to the Aryan Brotherhood, a neo-Nazi group with an alliance with the Mafia.

In the second murder, three members of the NF were convicted of slaying a member of the Mafia by a West Valley Superior Court jury. The death penalty did not apply in the case and the prisoners were sentenced to life imprisonment.

As a result of these slayings, and a long list of other suspected gang-related incidents, a small group of officers within valley police and sheriff's departments joined nearly 100 other investigators from 50 agencies throughout the state to combat the rise in street crime and the violence they believe is related.

They say they see a very real threat that these gangs will continue to grow in the future, spreading into every community in the state.

They predict gang leaders will use community street gangs to enforce their control on the lucrative illegal narcotics trade and, to a lesser degree, extortion rackets and robbery.

In response to these predictions, Chino Police Chief Jerry Doyle had this to say:

"Yes, all the indicators point to the fact that organized crime elements from La Nuestra Familia and the Mexican Mafia have gained a foothold in Chino and other parts of the valley. They have a good start in this western end of San Bernardino County."

Doyle said activities of the two notorious prison gangs are generally restricted to the areas of the valley cities where large populations of Latins reside.

But, he added, "We feel to some extent their activities — crime in general — may move outward into other areas. The whole area is affected in one way or another."

He said activities of both the street gangs and the prison gangs in narcotics trafficking, burglary and extortion, particularly of illegal aliens, has been increasing steadily in the valley.

Pomona Police Chief Richard A. Slaght said, "The increasing prison gang violence is definitely a concern of this department. We are continuing to maintain a liaison and exchange of information on prison gang members in the city with the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department prison gang unit and with other surrounding police agencies.

"The general citizenry should definitely be educated in this growing area of concern.

"The citizens are the eyes and ears of the police department and should be made aware of what to look for regarding this prison gang activity.

"To this date, prison gang violence has not directly spread to all segments of the community, but if it is not controlled by all law enforcement agencies, the problems that exist in our prisons could escalate to Pomona and other areas of the state.

"I would encourage all local citizens to help the police department and other law enforcement agencies by reporting all suspected gang activity. They should definitely voice their concern over the recent fixed-term sentencing law and other laws involving the early release of prisoners from the state prisons."

In recent months, gangland activity has steadily increased in California, prompting investigations by the Department of Corrections, the Department of Justice and local police investigative teams.

Meanwhile, investigators have watched as some of the most vicious criminals in the United States, known to be affiliated with the two major prison gangs, have been released from the prison system and appeared on community streets.

The concern of investigators, as expressed by Chief Slaght, is mounting that even greater numbers of gang members will now start appearing on the streets because of the new fixed-term sentencing law.

Chief Doyle added his concern: "Any program that releases prison inmates more quickly — and the fixed-term sentencing program appears to fit the bill — will certainly cause more of a crime problem in the valley."

Doyle is especially concerned because of the proximity of the prisons to Chino. He indicated that the Chino City Council recently voiced its disapproval of the possibility of adding yet another state prison on state land in Chino.

He said for the most part, the prison system likes to keep inmates close to their families. Studies have been made which indicate that the number of visits an inmate gets while in prison from his family and friends has a direct effect on whether or not he will become a recidivist. The more visits, the less chance a prisoner has of returning to prison for other crimes, according to the studies.

Doyle said that many of the inmate families move into the valley area to be close to spouses and it becomes "home."

Doyle explained, "They go into prison. They get out of prison quickly, and they go back home."

He added, "Anyone from this area (near the prisons), expecially if he is Mexican-American, would be in the category of being affected by one of these two gangs."

Critics of fixed prison term law are quiet now

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

Critics of the controversial determinate sentencing law that threatened to cause the early release of thousands of state prison inmates starting July 1 have drawn a sigh of relief with passage of an urgency bill which lengthens some prison terms.

The determinate, or "fixed" sentencing law, was enacted by the California Legislature last year and became effective on July 1.

It replaced the indeterminate sentencing laws used since 1917 which more or less left the decision to members of the California Adult Authority on how long a convicted felon would stay in prison.

Under the old sentencing law, a judge could only sentence a convicted felon to "a term prescribed by law" under the California Penal Code. The "law" was prescribed by the Adult Authority.

But under the new fixed sentence law, once a jury convicts a felon the presiding judge views the Penal Code's punishment section that states exactly the time a prisoner is to serve in a state prison.

When the felon enters prison, he knows how many years he must serve and when he is eligible for a parole hearing. The only exception is the person sentenced to a life term. Life terms will remain under the "indeterminate" sentencing section where an inmate is granted a parole hearing after seven years. And if parole is denied, a new hearing will be held annually.

Requests for parole will be heard by members of the Community Release Board, which replaces the Adult Authority.

A main concern of the fixed term law was that many inmates had already served longer than their reasonable times according to the new sentence schedule.

This provided that each inmate sentenced before July 1 would be entitled to an immediate parole hearing — and by law, within 90 days.

Officials said it would be an impossible task for the Community Release Board to review as many as 7,000 cases in the 90 days allowed.

Critics argued that legally if a prisoner did not receive this hearing within the 90 day period, he would almost automatically have to be released from prison. Up to 2,400 inmates might be released by Nov. 1, they stated.

But a last minute urgency bill sponsored by Assemblyman Daniel Boatwright, D-10th Dist., had most of its provisions passed.

The bill gave the Community Release Board nine months to review all the cases and the authority to automatically increase prison terms if inmates' crimes or actions warranted it.

If the Community Release Board does not complete all the hearings by next March or April, the remaining "non-hearing" inmates might be granted immediate release, said officials.

Phillip Guthrie, spokesman for the Department of Corrections, stated that because of the Boatwright amendments, "We are not looking for a flood of releases.

"During the past few years, 6,000 to 8,000 prisoners have been released each year. This year, we expect 7,000 to 8,000 releases."

Guthrie said a change in the wording of the fixed term sentencing law itself had perhaps quieted many of the critics.

The law charges the Community Release Board and the Department of Corrections would be "guided by, but not limited to" the fixed term sentencing, he explained.

But Guthrie did state that all the hurdles in properly administering the law have yet to be overcome.

Arabs pessimistic about peace effort

U.S. no magician in Mideast

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Arabs are increasingly pessimistic that the United States can pull a rabbit out of the hat but are dependent on U.S. diplomatic efforts as the only alternative to war with Israel.

The semi-official Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram reported Saturday Egypt is coordinating a united Arab front that will present a peace plan to U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who begins his Mideast tour in Egypt Aug. 1-3.

The plan includes phased Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab lands, creation of a Palestinian state from the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza strip and an end to the state of war.

These demands may be altered to include acceptance of some Israeli presence in occupied areas Israel considers critical to its security and linking of a Palestinian state to Jordan or other Arab states.

In the view of observers in Beirut, bridging the gap between the Arab "bottom line" and Israel's basic demands presents America with an impossible challenge of diplomatic engineering.

"Everyone is beginning to see at least the remote possibility of solutions between Israel and Egypt, Syria and Jordan on their bilateral problems. But that has focused attention on the toughest issue, the Palestinians, and it just depresses people," said an experienced U.S. diplomat.

A key stop for Vance on his new Mideast tour will be in the Syrian capital of Damascus (Aug. 3-5) where he is likely to encounter the untractable realities of the Palestinian problem.

Syrian President Hafez Assad has used force and persuasion on the Palestinian leadership to accept Syria as the guerrillas' most effective sponsor. But to maintain his role as Palestinian protector and avoid trouble with radicals at home and in neighboring Iraq, Assad cannot compromise too far.

May have taken the wrong truck

Did Paris hijackers goof?

PARIS (AP) — The hijackers of a truck carrying a 17-ton container of coins worth $3.54 million may have mistaken it for an identical container of banknotes worth more than 10 times that amount.

The possibility was raised by a detective who was interviewed by the Paris newspaper L'Aurore.

"This isn't only a hypothesis, but it really seems that the bandits had other information: a container of the same shape and color, holding banknotes printed on the special presses of the Bank of France ... was supposed to arrive" the same day," he said.

The Bank of France said it was an "absolutely improbable hypothesis." And a man identifying himself as one of the thieves called a newspaper and said he was indignant that anyone could think his men were duped or make fun of them.

Four armed men staged the robbery Thursday outside the Gare de Lyon railroad station. There has been speculation the hijackers would have a difficult time getting rid of tons of newly minted coins

The Bank of France said shipping banknotes in an unguarded container was "unthinkable," and such shipments are always made in armored cars accompanied by security men "armed to the teeth."

The bandits apparently were stung by the suggestion they made a mistake. A man identifying himself as a member of the gang telephoned L'Aurore, the only Paris newspaper to report the haul included only 10franc coins.

"You were the only ones to speak of 10-franc pieces," the man said. "You therefore knew more than the others. In that case, you must equally doubt that we were had. We can't stand your irony. You don't have the right to make fun of us."

The newspaper said it believed the call was authentic but the police refused comment.

Train trestle ablaze

A wooden Santa Fe Railroad train trestle erupted into flames Saturday night in Upland bringing out two companies of Upland fire fighters to extinguish the blaze.

The trestle, located between Eighth and Ninth Streets in the eastern 1300 block of the city, was fully involved when the first company of firefighters arrived, Upland Fire Capt. Bob Martinez said.

The trestle was completely ablaze for its entire 200-foot length. Investigators from the Santa Fe Railway Co. were at the scene late Saturday testing the the trestle.

Aftermath: coastal city ravaged by freak brush blaze

Kite 'string', high winds spawn disaster

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The wind was up. It was a fine evening to fly a kite.

But this kite tangled in a power line, and sparks flew, igniting a roaring brush fire that 10 hours later had left 234 houses burned to charred rubble on a hillside that was an enclave of the wealthy.

It was the hot, dry wind out of the mountains — the same wind that had tempted a young man to fly a kite on a summer evening — that drove flames from house to house faster than firemen could respond.

On Tuesday, the hillside had been a neighborhood of winding streets with expensive homes looking out over the city and the ocean.

On Wednesday, charred wood floated in swimming pools, bushy green junipers were black skeletons and cactus pulp had turned black and orange like a burnt pumpkin.

The governor sent the National Guard in to prevent looting, but there was little left to loot.

Damage was estimated at $23.5 million.

One woman, whose house was spared, looked at her neighborhood and moaned, "How can I live here?"

But, then, could she live anywhere else? There is no place better in Santa Barbara. This is as expensive a neighborhood as you will find here and for many, nowhere else will do.

Pamela Cochran had lived in her house on the hill 10 years before it burned to the ground Tuesday night. As her husband and son picked at the rubble, she said she didn't know if they would rebuild.

But minutes later, she turned excitedly to her aunt and said, "Look, Aunt Audrey, if we rebuild, we could put the entrance over there on that side street instead of on this busy street."

The wind played cruel and capricious tricks when it spread the fire. Some houses survived without a scratch while others burned to the ground. The wood house next door to the Cochrans' was as good as new.

Mrs. Cochran kicked her mailbox and muttered, "Look at that dumb mailbox. Why is it still standing? And look at that tree that blocks our view. Why didn't it burn?"

She said she had saved only two boxes of photographs.

SOME WERE SPARED

One home appears untouched, but others in this Santa Barbara suburb scene are still smoldering this week after the blaze, started by a young man whose kite grounded on high tension electric wires, swept through canyons and rustic areas of this coastal city.

Row in traffic ends in beating of three

Three West End residents, one of them a 3-year-old boy, were seriously injured Friday night when an argument over a speeding incident turned into a gang beating in San Bernardino County territory near the Pomona city limit.

Injured were Alexander Frater, 36, 11341 Kimberly St., Pomona; William Jack Bray, 3, 11330 Ramona, Pomona and Everett Eddie Nelson, 33, 11335 Kimberly St., Pomona.

Though the residences are in the West End, they have Pomona mailing addresses.

West End Sheriff's deputies said that a disagreement over a speeding van in an alley adjacent to Kimberly Street started the fight Friday. Deputies said that after the van had made two high speed passes through the alley with the two elder victims complaining on both occasions, the occupants of the van returned to the alley on foot armed with baseball bats, pipes and clubs.

Further words were exchanged. The child was injured when the windshield of a truck in which he was sitting was smashed out. Deputies said seven or eight persons were involved in the attack. West End deputies arrested four persons for assault with a deadly weapon, three of them juveniles.

The adult arrested was Joe Foster, 18, 4477 Phillips St. Deputies said two more persons are still wanted.

Frater was reported in satisfactory condition Saturday evening at San Bernardino County Hospital suffering from wounds to the head and face. Nelson was reported in fair and stable condition at Doctors Hospital in Montclair with injuries to the ribs, possible internal injuries and possible kidney damage.

The child was treated at Kaiser Foundation Hospital for facial cuts and possible injuries to the eyes, deputies said.

Deputies are continuing their investigation.

King of hoboes put to rest

OGDEN, Iowa (AP) — The casket was draped with a red neckerchief, the symbol of the true rail-riding hobo, as 150 young and old paid their last respects Saturday to the Hardrock Kid.

The organist played "King of the Road" and then the Kid, born John Mislen on Feb. 7, 1905, in Trenton, N.J., made his last trip to Britt, about 70 miles away, where five times he was crowned King of the Hoboes.

"You were his home. You were his family. You were his friends," the current hobo king, Steamtrain Maury Graham of Toledo, Ohio, told the mourners in the eulogy.

"I know if it was possible, there would be thousands here from across the state who knew and liked him."

Other fellow travelers at the funeral were Fry Pan Jack, Sparky Smith and Virginia Slim.

"He liked his beer. He was clean. He was a good man," said W.C. Buckmaster of Laurens, one of those who came from across Iowa, joined by a few from Wisconsin and Nebraska, to bid the Kid a final farewell.

The Kid had stopped off here for his yearly visit as he headed for the annual "Hobo Day" at Britt next week. Hoboes from across the country gather at Britt each year to elect a new king.

Steamtrain Maury said hoboes are a vanishing breed. There are only "about 40 real hoboes left."

The Kid died under a tree in Ogden's city park last Sunday night. His slight body was found the next morning.

"Nothing could be more wonderful for a hobo than to cross over the Jordan while sleeping in a park," Steamtrain Maury said.

He said he heard of the Kid's death while he was in Clinton.

"I was shocked and started freighting here as fast as I could. But he was 72 and at that age you know you're going to get called — within the next 25 years," Steamtrain said.

Efforts were made to try and find relatives of the Kid. They were unsuccessful.

Carson Funeral Home arranged the service and donated the casket. The Britt Chamber of Commerce provided the final resting place and vault.

Pomona man shot from ambush

A 35-year-old Pomona man was shot to death from ambush early Saturday morning in what police said may have been a gang-related killing.

Jesus Ponce Espinoza of 2329 Academy Ave., Pomona, was shot six times as he left a Pomona tavern at 1325 S. Garey Ave. about 3 a.m., officers reported.

The victim was walking to his car when the shots rang out, said Pomona Police Officer David T. Clark. Espinoza was discovered by police lying in a pool of blood in the parking lot of the Joy Room bar.

Clark said the bullets came from a .22 caliber semi-automatic rifle.

Officers had no suspects in the case. Witnesses told Clark they saw two persons running from the parking lot after six shots were fired in rapid succession.

Espinoza suffered wounds in the arm, elbow, stomach, upper chest, right side and thigh, Clark reported.

Police theorized the assailants had waited behind the bar for the victim. But they had no description of the attackers.

Clark noted that Espinoza had "Chino license plates" on his car, and figured the suspects saw the plates and shot the victim. He theorized the shooting might be part of a current rivalry between Chino and Pomona gangs.

Man nabbed in $6,4000 robbery near bank

A Van Nuys man was arrested late Friday afternoon by West End Sheriff's deputies in connection with the robbery of a purse containing $6,400 which occurred Friday morning in front of the Bank of America branch, 9719 Foothill Blvd., Cucamonga.

Arrested was Ernie Raul Saenz, 35, 14822 Delano St., Van Nuys on a charge of armed robbery. He was booked at the West End Sheriff's Office.

Deputies said the robbery occurred about 10:30 a.m. Friday when a man forced his way into a woman's car in front of the bank, threatened her with a pistol, took her purse and fled to a nearby car.

A witness followed the robber to the car and watched him drive off. As the robber fled, he fired one shot at the witness. The witness later provided officers with the license number of the car.

This led West End Sheriff's detectives Joe Henry and Richard Peterson to the Van Nuys address where Saenz was apprehended without incident Friday afternoon. A weapon and a purse containing $6,000 were recovered in Saenz' car, deputies said.

Emergency landing for 727 jetliner

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A Delta 727 jetliner on its way to Atlanta with 88 passengers was forced to return to Lindbergh Field on Friday with one engine shut down after a fire warning light flashed in the cockpit.

The Federal Aviation Administration said Flight 1212 flew out over the sea 18 miles west of San Diego after the fire light signaled.

Fire trucks were waiting when the plane landed safely at 12:50 p.m.

There were no reports of injury in the incident.

Life-size papier-mache animals

Clovis kids know 'milk' comes from paper cows

CLOVIS (AP) — Kindergartners from this cowtown who attend Sierra Vista School aren't about to wind up like those city-bred kids who think milk comes from a paper carton — they know it comes from a paper cow.

And when it comes to spotting good horseflesh, the children in teacher Isabel Farmer's class make sure to check out the steed's belly spring.

The children got their agricultural insight by watching over a unique classroom herd: a lifesize papier-mache cow that can be successfully milked, a hard bucking papier-mache horse and a flock of grocery bag chickens.

"The cow (named Clarissa) was made about five years ago when we were studying the farm," Mrs. Farmer said. "It was my husband's idea to make her milk."

The sawhorse skeleton and papier mache hide are nice touches, but it is Clarissa's milking apparatus that makes the cow outstanding in her field.

The organs involved are a plastic bladder inserted in Clarissa's mid-section, a hose that runs down her tail and an artificial nipple like those used to feed motherless calves.

After one year as a classroom attraction, Clarissa was retired for four years in the Farmers' barn where she saw duty as a saddle rack.

This year, however, she was herded back into the school where she joined her newly created partner, Hortense.

Like the cow, the lifesize horse was a community project. Mrs. Farmer's students did the papier-mache work after her husband designed the body.

An automobile spring makes Hortense a horse that can barely be ridden by the young tykes.

"Just touch it with your finger and it goes in all directions," said Mrs. Farmer. "In fact, it's almost too wild. It does take watching."

She said the classroom herd is made to order for teaching lessons about farming as well as being a popular play area.

But noting Clovis's image as a western community, Mrs. Farmer said: "Sometimes I wonder, though, when the kids ask you if the cow is a girl. I thought that being from Clovis they'd know about things like that."

Man runs his farm aided by wheelchair

HINCKLEY, Minn. (AP) — "It was just a question of getting organized," says Lawrence Mans, who has been running his farm successfully from a wheelchair for the past 19 years.

Mans was 30 years old when a tree fell on him, breaking his back and paralyzing him from the waist down, while he was cutting down trees on his turkey farm.

Today he manages a large beef-cattle herd on his 640-acre farm near Hinckley, in northeastern Minnesota, and even raises all the feed for his cattle.

"They worked with me at the hospital to get me back to work," said Mans, who was hospitalized for 13 months after the February 1958 accident. "I went along with it because I knew a guy should try to improve himself.

"The doctors suggested I find something I could adapt to more easily than farming. I was young and could have adapted to something else. But I've always liked farming and we had a good start with the turkeys. I wanted to keep it going."

Mans and his wife, Mary, hired some help when he got home from the hospital because their children, one boy and three girls, were still young.

"That got expensive, though, so we came to the conclusion that we'd have to set up the operation so we could run it ourselves or quit. We stuck with it," Mans said.

He said he set up a feed mill so it was mechanized and he could run it himself, then equipped his tractors and car with hand controls.

"I'm able to pull myself up on the tractors," Mans said as he backed his wheelchair up to the tractor seat, grabbed the steering wheel and hoisted himself up into the seat.

"Over the years I've developed a lot of muscles in my arms. I'm capable of handling myself. But you see why I like small tractors," he said.

"If it weren't for my wife, Mary, I'd never be farming," he added. "She does all the jobs I just can't do, like cutting the twine on the bales and spreading the hay out for the cows when we feed them; and helping the cows in the spring while they're calving or chasing them into pens. There's quite a few things a person needs help with."

Some 20,000 persons sought 'deliverance'

Running the rapids on wild Chattooga River is humbling

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Chattooga River doesn't discriminate. It can be humbling, even deadly, to novices and expers alike. But the subject of James Dickey's popular novel last year attracted some 20,000 people hoping to tame the wild rapids and perhaps seeking their deliverance.

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

LONG CREEK, S.C. (AP) — This is the wild river James Dickey wrote about in his 1970 novel, "Deliverance" — the unnamed Chattooga now protected from such profanities against nature as dams and factories.

The popularity of Dickey's novel and the ensuing movie probably helped in getting the federal government to declare the Chattooga a wild and scenic river. But the same popularity that helped save it also drew 20,000 people to the river last year to make the "Deliverance" trip.

While you still underestimate the river at your peril, on a summer weekend you'll find canoes, rafts and kayaks piled up in a gunwhale-to-gunwhale traffic jam at the approaches to the big rapids.

Some are artists with their boats, cutting precise paths through the rapids. Most are novices who have come, at least in part, to savor the titillating knowledge that some people — not many, but some — have died on this river because their wits and strength were not enough.

The run begins at a highway bridge in a forest glade where only ripples disturb the surface and the river is, as Dickey wrote, "not dangerous-looking, but sprightly and vivid."

It remains that way for a couple of miles, long enough to bore even novices like us: two newsmen, a school teacher and a college student. But the river taught us its first lesson very quickly.

You can hear a big rapid before you can see it. There is a rumbling in the distance that grows louder and deeper as the current sweeps you closer. The noise told us that we were being swept toward the river's first major rapid, Big Shoals.

Canoeists rate rapids on a scale of one to six. One is a ripple in a stream; six is a swirling maelstrom of boulders and falls and white water that stands in permanent fury around a canoeist's ears. Big Shoals, by the Chattooga's standards, is not so bad: Class Three.

The riverbed is blocked by boulders, some as big as trucks. The only passage is on the right, and it seems clear enough. You enter along the tongue of clear water between two rocks. Then, amid the froth and foam of white water, you jam the canoe 90 degrees into a chute to the left, then pivot to the right and slide down a two-foot drop to the eddy below.

We hit the entrance right, but suddenly we were in trouble. The current was too strong, and before we could make our sharp left turn, we were swept into some rocks and pinned there by the foaming water. Within seconds, the canoe was swamped. We could not move it, and it began to bend. The river was capable of breaking it in half and leaving us stranded.

Deliverance arrived in the form of three more canoes. Eight people waded into the current, braced themselves, and managed to pry our canoe loose. We paddled on, preferring not to think what might have been had not help arrived.

The river is not always so lenient. The federal government has fished 11 bodies from the water since it assumed control of the river in 1974. Other people, like Stacey Lange, an 11-year-old from Savannah, Ga., escape with only a bad scare.

Stacey and her mother followed us over the Slide, a six-foot drop off a sheer ledge. They made the mistake of hitting the falls at an oblique angle instead of head-on. They flipped over, and Stacey's leg was caught in some loose ropes inside the canoe.

The current swept the overturned canoe downstream with Stacey pinned beneath, screaming. Fortunately, she was wearing her life jacket. It kept her head above water until she could wriggle her legs free.

We grabbed their canoe and pulled them to shore. Stacey lay on the beach, sobbing and trembling, for a full five minutes.

But a run down the Chattooga need not always be frightening. The river rises in the Appalachians of western North Carolina and tumbles 49 miles to Lake Tugalloo. Along the way, it forms the border between South Carolina and Georgia.

The countryside is backwoods America. Billboards and bumper stickers proclaim the gospel. Shotgun blasts pockmark the highway signs. In the novel, the natives were worm-eaten and murderous, but that was pure fiction.

The people are friendly. Louise Coldren, for example, runs the Dillard House restaurant in Clayton, on the Georgia side. River runners come by the scores for her nightly buffets of fried chicken, fresh vegetables and pudding. All you can eat for $2.50.

The river is divided by highway bridges into sections that get progressively harder. Section One is narrow and impassable. Section Four is one dangerous rapid after another, for experts only. Most people stay in Sections Two and Three.

Section Two, with the exception of Big Shoals, has little that a prudent novice cannot negotiate. The Forest Service has a campground where it ends, at Earl's Ford.

Section Three is tougher, with rapids like the Roller Coaster, the Narrows, and Keyhole classified as fours and fives.

Beginners might try a guided trip in rubber rafts, offered by a number of outfitters who have set up shop along the river. They cost $15-$25 per person.

The Nantahala Outdoor Center's Chattooga outpost will rent canoes for $15 the first day and $10 the second, but you aren't allowed to take them on Section Four.

Letters at the push of a button

Computer politics: special interests have new clout

EDITOR'S NOTE: Letters from voters back home can have more impact on the way Congress votes than any special interest group can muster. But the special interest group has not lost its clout. It's reinforced it through computer politics — zeroing in on a few sympathetic voters who can create a flood of mail to support a particular cause. The effect is that a small minority can affect the majority.

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In this dawning age of computer politics the voice that counts is the one that's heard, and that means turning out those cards and letters at the push of a button.

The advanced state of computer art has given pressure groups formidable strength which sometimes has the tail wagging the dog on important policy questions, legislation and elections.

This trend is causing alarm among some who fear the views of an organized minority being imposed on an unsuspecting majority on critical issues facing the country.

On the other hand, the new ability of individuals to have their voices heard effectively through computer targeting is moving millions of Americans into political activity.

Behind this revolution is the computer and direct mail expert.

Names, addresses, telephone numbers and other vital data can be stored and then retrieved selectively to command from just the right constituency the pressure to influence the right politician at just the right time.

Campaigns can be financed for office or a crusade for a cause by identifying the people most likely to be sympathetic, sending them a form letter carefully drafted to raise their ire, fear or public spirit and getting checks from them by return mail.

These computers file information on magnetic tape, call it up instantly and then write, address and mail letters. They can do in a few hours a mailing job which would take a hundred clerks weeks to accomplish.

The more sophisticated ones can target a lawmaker's district with precision, pinpointing his political supporters, his campaign workers and the sources of his campaign contributions.

The computer expert trying to sway a vote in Congress can pick out the wavering swing votes and bombard them with sacks of mail from the voters back home.

An outcry from the voters in his district can have more influence on a congressman than any lobbyist or organization, no matter how big or powerful.

"The votes are taken here, but the real leverage on congressmen is back home," says one practitioner of the art.

Within about 16 hours of learning that a vote is upcoming on a pet issue, a special interest group, working with computer experts, can call up the names of the right people to contact. And within 24 hours they can have letters in the mail to each name.

The more active groups will follow the letters with phone calls to reinforce the appeal to write to a senator, a congressman or the White House.

Such groups can have letters hitting the target's desk within 60 hours of the first alert, telegrams and mailgrams much sooner.

This year, this very kind of pressure has been credited with killing or endangering legislation and nominations which had been considered fairly safe prior to the orchestrated opposition.

More than 500,000 pieces of mail were delivered to the White House opposing the common situs picketing bill, and at least as much was received on Capitol Hill, most of it generated in a direct mail campaign directed by Richard A. Viguerie, the ranking master of computer politics.

The most recent mail storm was over President Carter's proposal to make voter registration easier. The White House alone received some 50,000 pieces of mail against it, virtually all of it uniform post cards or petitions obviously originated by a computer drive.

The vote which has given the White House and congressional leaders the most worry, however, was the narrow confirmation of Paul Warnke as chief U.S. arms negotiator.

The key vote which gave Warnke ambassadorial rank was 58 to 40, well below the two-thirds Senate majority it will take to approve any treaty he brings back.

As these examples illustrate, conservatives aroused and organized by the George Wallace and Ronald Reagan presidential campaigns have taken a big lead in computer politics.

The innovator behind this is Viguerie, who raised more than $7 million for Wallace in 1976. His company, Richard A. Viguerie Co. Inc., of Falls Church, Va., is by far the largest and most effective in the field, accounting for about 70 per cent of all political direct mail.

Viguerie reasoned that if people were interested enough to contribute to one conservative cause, they likely would care for another. People who gave to Wallace are now contributing to continue the causes he espoused, from antigun control to antibusing.

As people respond to the various mail appeals, their names are filed as future prospects. Those who don't respond eventually are dropped or downgraded to reserve status.

All the while new names are being sought. Lists are bought from other organizations, political campaigns or magazine subscription rolls, all carefully selected for mutual interest.

By merging and upgrading the various lists he has handled, Viguerie can mail effectively to a pool of 30 million people. He sends 100 million pieces of mail a year, and his success has spawned a host of imitators.

The moderate-to-liberal side has nothing close to matching this massive mailing pool built by the conservatives, but setbacks suffered this year have prompted it to mobilize.

The leading firm on this side of the fence is Craver, Mathews, Smith & Co. of Arlington, Va., headed by Roger Craver, one of the key people behind the remarkable growth of Common Cause, the self-styled citizens' lobby.

Riding a crest of growing public discontent during the Vietnam-Watergate era, Common Cause quickly developed a 250,000 membership and proved that moderates and liberals are as susceptible to mobilization as conservatives.

George McGovern reinforced this view with the success of his direct mail fundraising in 1972, and the Craver firm raised $1.5 million for Morris Udall in 1976 on a shoestring and a computer.

Building an effective list is critical to the process. It's difficult without the impetus of a presidential campaign or a Common Cause phenomenon to produce spontaneous subscription.

The first step for the beginning group without a mailing list is to buy one, usually from a magazine with a readership believed to be in general sympathy with the group's aims.

"But in many cases the best lists are not available for rental," says Tom Mathews, another Common Cause veteran and one of Craver's partners. "It is not impossible to start with a rented list, "but it's hard and you've got to have a very hot issue."

The problem is that most groups with lists like to use them to get better lists. So, they don't just sell them, they demand a name-for-name trade. A new group without names to trade has a hard time getting any.

This is why firms like Viguerie's and Craver's are so important. With some lists of their own to deal with and the ability to broker marriages between others of mutual interest, they are the only avenue for the average group to break into the field.

Much of Craver's business is to help build new groups and strengthen them to compete with the successful conservative groups. One of these is New Directions, a citizens group modeled on Common Cause but oriented toward foreign policy.

The Warnke episode led officials at the White House and in the Senate to contact Craver about concocting an antidote before they were slapped down on a really critical issue.

Senate pulsetakers estimate that a direct mail campaign switched five to 10 votes against Warnke, and they fear the same pressures could kill chances of curbing the arms race or settling the Panama Canal dispute.

Warm in summer, cool in winter

Abandoned coal mine is a haven for greenery

By R. E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Petunias and lettuce, tomatoes and marigolds are thriving in an Eastern Kentucky greenhouse thanks to an abandoned coal mine that provides warmth in winter and cool air in summer.

Set up several years ago by the University of Kentucky, the project is now one of several greenhouse experiments under the federal Energy Research and Development Administration.

Government interest centers on the greenhouses as natural solar energy collectors. Many of the projects use greenhouses to store daytime solar energy for use at night.

Instead of using stored energy, however, the Virgie, Ky., greenhouse draws air from an abandoned coal mine — a plentiful resource in the Appalachian Mountains.

Air in the mine seldom varies from its average of 55 degrees Fahrenheit in summer and 52 degrees in winter. A university student who noticed this conceived the greenhouse idea.

The greenhouse, near the mine entrance, is connected to the mine shaft by a long plastic tube. Three fans force air up from the mine to help maintain the greenhouse at a steady temperature.

An energy agency spokeswoman noted that one winter day with the outside temperature at zero, a greenhouse thermometer read 45. And she said that on a 95-degree summer day, the mine air held the greenhouse temperature to 85.

The only power the greenhouse uses is electricity for the fans.

Energy is saved, Dr. Jack Buxton of the university said, because no fuel is needed for heating in winter.

In addition to heating and cooling the greenhouse, the agency spokeswoman said, the mine provides air with more than the normal carbon dioxide content.

Because plants thrive on carbon dioxide, it is pumped into the air in normal greenhouses.

Prof. John Walker of the university said the extra carbon dioxide has resulted in stronger plants faster.

Walker said there are more than 200,000 abandoned mines in the United States, and many caves. A significant number of them could be used as greenhouses, he said, making indoor farming a more economical enterprise in many parts of the country.

"Greenhouses like ours could be commercialized and could mean a profitable new industry for areas which now have little economic activity," Walker said.

Buxton said several inquiries about operating such greenhouses have been received, including ones from a steel company, the town of David, Ky., and from a Mennonite group.

Among the crops Buxton said have been grown successfully in the greenhouse are chrysanthemums, petunias, marigolds, tomatoes, peppers and cauliflower.

A problem occurs from November through January, however, when excessive humidity results from water trapped in the mine. The air has a relative humidity of almost 100 per cent in those months, officials said.

With cold outdoor temperatures, humidity tends to condense on the greenhouse roof, causing a thick indoor fog and sometimes even rain.

In this humidity "diseases do well too," Buxton commented, noting that there were disease problems with snapdragons and carnations in the winter.

For the rest of the year, however, the plants thrived in the warmer temperatures, lower humidity and increased sunlight.

Despite the humidity, Walker said he thinks it may be possible to grow woody ornamental plants in the winter, such as rhododendrons, yews, silver birch and azaleas.

Overall, Walker said, the mine-connected greenhouse is more than eight times more efficient in its energy use than a normal greenhouse.

Elysium: pocket oasis is beset by nudity controversy

Optional clothing rule stirs rift among planners

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

Tucked away in the mountains of Santa Monica, about an hour's drive from Pomona, is an eight-acre smogless plateau known as Elysium Field.

It is not suited for subdivisions, and its undersoil of clay and alkali makes vegetation sparse. But when everything else is socked in by fog or plagued by air pollution, this pocket oasis is blessed with blue skies and sunshine.

Elysium is where a thousand people from all over the Southland go to soak up sun, attend workshops that range from assertiveness training to sensuality, and spend a day with their children in a setting that is "clothing optional."

Ed Lange, executive director, claims there is no place like it anywhere in the world.

He says he has hosted delegations from Paris, Germany, Australia and India, and members include a judge from Philadelphia, a publisher and an inventor from New York City and several actors who use fictitious names and large sunglasses so they can relax unrecognized and undisturbed.

Proponants see Elysium as a growth center for human potential; opponents view it as a nudist camp which stigmatizes Topanga Canyon, an unincorporated community of 5,000 in the San Fernando Valley.

"How would you like to have your daughter stand by the window day after day and watch that multitude of nude bodies?" Mrs. Joan Moore, president of the Topanga Woman's Club, asks.

She says the Elysium scene has embarrassed residents who invite guests for visits. Others contend their neighbors in the buff hold down property values.

The 10-year-old feud over the existence of Elysium Field has now erupted into the biggest battle ever conducted before a county commission in the entire state.

GREAT WOOD FACE

Claremont sculptor Charles Chase leans against an erect, dead tree trunk on which he carved a Tiki-like face and now exhibits in his yard. Behind it is another erect dead tree trunk. Chase left it untouched because, he said, he could not improve upon the work of the original sculptor. These pictures are acceptable to city officials who have ordered Chase to remove the hollow log at left from his yard since it is not a work of art. Chase disagrees.

He creates stern, wooden visages

Claremont's maverick artist 'stumping' local officialdom

By CONRAD CASLER
PB Staff Writer

Claremont's Charles Chase is an ex-teacher, full-time music store owner, a cuddly polar bear of a grandfather with an unruly shock of white hair to prove it, an avocational sculpter — and a maverick.

The latter two categories have Chase in hot water with city officialdom.

Or it might be that city officialdom is in hot water with Charles Chase.

It all stems from Chase's penchant for dragging multiton logs to the front yard of his home at 706 W. 12th St. Some he gathered himself and laboriously transported them home.

Others were willingly deposited there by Claremont city tree crews upon Chase's request after they cut down hollow and diseased live oak and sycamore trees in Memorial Park.

Several medium-to-large-sized trunks have been transformed by Chase into stylized visages resembling tiki gods and implanted vertically into concrete.

Another bears no blows from the sculpter's hammer and chisel, but stands carefully trimmed and debarked on its own merits with amputated limb stumps pointing skyward at irregular angles.

"I figured the Guy who made that one was a lot better sculptor than I, so I left it that way," Chase said.

Trouble is that one hollowed log of 4-foot diameter and several smaller ones lie on their sides in Chase's front yard either as unsculpted sculptures standing on their natural beauty, or awaiting a later date with Chase's mallet and cutting tools.

It is these which are causing the battle with City Hall.

Chase said it began last month when he received a letter from City Hall stating the matter would have to be cleared up since a neighbor complained of the logs lying helter-skelter in his yard.

Another letter last month was more threatening. Then it was followed by another on July 11 implying legal action by the city attorney if the matter of unsightly logs lying pell-mell in the front yard were not corrected.

"I ignored all the letters until last week," Chase said. "Then I picketed City Hall one day for three hours and another hour the next day, carrying a sign stating the city was unfair to sculpters. Lots of passers-by asked me about what I was doing and gave me encouragement. But no one in City Hall stuck even his head out the door.

"So now I'm ignoring the whole thing. I'm not really against City Hall; just one bureaucrat in it."

Chase said a city inspector came to his home and told him he would have to do something with the logs.

"I asked him if the sculpture I did and imbedded upright in concrete was okay. He said it was. I asked him about the natural one which also is upright. He said that was okay.

"Then I asked him if the logs lying down were sculpture. He told me no. I guess in Claremont a sculpture has to be vertical to be accepted and legal."

Chase said neighborhood children play on the logs and have fun. He said the inspector wouldn't tell him who issued the complaint.

"I told him 'You know what you can do with an anonymous complainer.' That's the last I've heard of the case so far."

Paul Cook, Claremont's director of community development, said the city is not against art, but that Chase has some legitimate sculptures in his front yard and some logs "just lying around."

"We are acting only on a couple of neighbors' complaints. We don't have time to initiate action like this on our own, only on neighbors' complaints," said Cook

"We have no complaints on those upright sculptures, just those logs lying on their sides that haven't been sculpted," he said.

What's the next action?

Cook said either Chase will comply with the city edict, or the horizontal logs will be removed at Chase's expense.

When will that be?

Cook said he was not sure.

The man who runs the Folk Music Center in Claremont's Village, is especially proud of two rather esoteric sculptures in his fenced back yard which violate no front yard nor esthetic ordinance.

One is made of native granite rocks piled (drilled and bolted) into the form of a powerful man with arms folded in a seemingly passive but potentially aggressive position.

Controlling hospital costs:

Pomona hospital administrator says public should seek assurance of quality care

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

"If the state is going to embark on a program of controlling hospital costs, the public should seek some sort of assurance that it will still get quality care.

"I haven't seen anything which offers such a guarantee," says Robert Burwell, president of Pomona Valley Community Hospital, as he discusses the current legislative proposals to contain medical costs.

Burwell says that, to date, the many commissions and agencies designed to investigate and control hospital administration have only added to the cost of care through surcharges placed on the institutions.

"Of course, where there is fraud or mismanagement, it must be stopped, but most hospitals are as well managed as most businesses," Burwell continues.

"There's been a lot of talk about spending 8 per cent of the gross national product for health care, but that is the same amount spent on education and defense.

"Recent reports also show that Americans spend as much on liquor, cigarettes and cosmetics as on medical care. Maybe we need to reassess our priorities."

Last year, an average of $638 was spent for health care for every man, woman and child in America, reports show.

Burwell added that 8 per cent of the GNP for health care was in line with Canada and many of the western nations where the figure is 6 to 7 per cent, regardless of which type of health services is offered, government-controlled or private.

Health care prices have been rising much faster than the prices of other goods and services. The consumer price index for all items in the economy rose 98 per cent between 1950 and 1974. At the same time, the cost of a semi-private hospital room went up 532 per cent.

Dr. Martin Feldman, a Harvard health economist, reports that 75 per cent of the rise in the daily hospital cost is due to the increase in number of things done to patients while only 25 per cent is due to the higher prices of the services.

Burwell says the federal Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) figures say that 50 per cent of the increase in hospital costs is due to additional services provided the patient.

"The cost of patient care at PVCH has gone up 11 per cent since 1971, and this includes a lot of additional services, so we feel that this is within the general inflation rate," adds the hospital president.

"Patients are feeling the impact of some terrific increases which are unique to hospital operation, as compared to other businesses," continued Burwell. "This includes an increase in our malpractice insurance premiums from $94,000 to $610,000 — 643 per cent — in seven years."

Burwell adds that utility charges last year were $400,000, up 300 per cent over a few years ago. Food is up 95 per cent and drugs now cost 218 per cent more.

> 'I haven't seen anything which offers such a guarantee . . .' —Robert Burwell

"These are extraordinary impacts. I'm not sure the general public is participating in the debate of hospital costs with any knowledge based upon the true costs of providing good medical care."

Burwell reports that PVCH is operating at a 2 per cent profit. This, he adds, is not viewed as a good investment return by industrial standards.

He says that, by law, nonprofit hospitals such as PVCH can make no more than 10 per cent profit. But the hospital president admits, private hospitals do not have such constraints and their profit records are not usually available to the public.

Statistics show that, on the average, Californians stay in the hospital for shorter periods than anywhere else in the nation.

These same national figures show that California has too many hospital beds and many facilities are operating far below an economically sound ratio.

A state health planning agency says that California's 22,000 excess hospital beds contribute to the high cost of medical care. It is estimated that 10,597 of these surplus beds are in Los Angeles County alone.

Burwell agrees that the valley overbuilt hospital bed capacity during the 1960s but adds that the definition of bed capacity is misleading.

"The excess of beds in our valley is a backlash of tremendous growth in the area during the 1960s and was based upon projections of the anticipated population here.

"Not only did that population fail to materialize, but the local birthrate also dipped," adds the hospital administrator. "But, with the new surge in building in the area, we may 'grow into' our bed capacity."

Burwell adds, "A hospital is not like a hotel room which can accommodate any person.

"As the services expand, a hospital becomes a series of specialized units capable of serving only a specific type of patient. These include a neonatal nursery for prematures, a pediatrics unit, coronary care, intensive care and pulmonary therapy beds.

"There are times when we are at 85 per cent occupancy, according to the record, but don't have a single bed available for a general medical adult," he reports.

"There is a lot of talk about what these beds cost, but closing down a few beds is not the answer. We'd need to close down a whole hospital."

Like all administrators in the field, Burwell is concerned about reducing costs and says there are four methods by which this might be accomplished. They are improve management, eliminate duplication in services within a community, curtail research and technological development and limit or eliminate services provided the patient.

"I think the public has a right to expect good management of a hospital, just as of any other service. And the government has created many new bureaus and commissions to control licenses and administration.

"Unfortunately, the new laws are incredibly detailed and demanding. They include such requests as placing clocks with sweep-second hands in certain rooms. These demands mean more clerical staffing and equipment and personnel costs.

"In addition, a surtax is placed on the hospitals to support the operation of these bureaus and commissions. Of course, this adds to a hospital's overhead, and the cost eventually reaches the patient," continues Burwell.

All state and private agencies agree that the reimbursement for Medi-Cal and Medicare patients — a high percentage in all facilities — does not cover the current costs of care.

Acute hospitals, like convalescent hospitals and other agencies, must balance their books by having the private-pay and insurance-covered patient picking up the difference.

"In addition, many patients on insurance or state and federally supported programs may seek additional medical care which is possibly not essential," adds Burwell.

"But this is a physician and patient decision, the hospital is only the provider of the service. It doesn't determine which services will be offered what patient."

As to the elimination of duplicate services such as the highly publicized CAT scanners recently installed in the radiology departments of many Southland hospitals, Burwell says, "Who is to determine which community gets the equipment and which must go without?"

He adds that in areas where two hospitals are close enough to share facilities, this is being done on an increasing basis.

"But it's only feasible where hospitals share the same philosophies and standards and, probably, many of the same medical staff."

Burwell adds that the public has demanded the best medical and technical services possible within a community.

This includes 24-hour-a-day emergency services and other specialized facilities which add greatly to the overhead. They may be empty upon occasion, but must be staffed and ready when needed.

Burwell and other medical administrators are concerned that President Carter's plans to cut back on capital expenditures will seriously curtail research and development technology.

Services could be cut back or eliminated, Burwell says, but it is a

Extend the system to all

There is a state law in California that forbids licensed professionals from advertising their services, with two exceptions. One is a brief listing in the yellow pages of the phone directory, and the other is through references provided by professional societies or agencies.

For that reason, the U. S. Supreme Court's recent ruling that lawyers may advertise their services if they desire to do so represents a major breakthrough in an antiquated professional custom that it is not ethical to compete openly.

There is a bill in the California legislature that would allow lawyers and doctors to advertise and thereby provide the public with an opportunity to compare prices of professional services which they cannot do now.

Every professional society and many individual doctors, lawyers, optometrists, funeral directors, pharmacists and others are bringing pressure to bear on their representatives in Sacramento to kill the bill.

They claim that it would open the way to fraudulent advertising. That is merely a smoke screen to keep professionals from revealing their prices to the public so that the consumer can have the information needed to make a choice commensurate with their needs and ability to pay.

The bill, introduced by Assemblyman Terry Goggins, is called AB 52, "The Right to Compete Act of 1977." It is very carefully drawn to prohibit abuse. Professionals who commit fraud or misrepresentation would have their licenses to practice revoked.

Here is a list of things that could be advertised by professionals:

1. The name, address and phone number.
2. Office hours, and whether a foreign language is spoken.
3. The cost of services and commodities.
4. The field of specialty.
5. Whether credit cards or installment payments are accepted.
6. Professional information about the practitioner.

These are important factors when selecting a doctor or lawyer. Yet there is very little information now available to the public on these matters because of laws preventing their advertisement.

Chances of the Goggin bill in passing the legislature are slim at the present time because of the large number of legislators who are lawyers themselves and put the self interests of their profession ahead of the public good.

One of them, Assemblyman Bill McVittie of Upland, states that he is against allowing professionals to advertise because advertising will only help the newspapers, not the people who read them. Poppycock.

Healthy and open competition among professional practitioners is the only sure way of halting the rising costs of health and legal services that today are stretching the family budget to the breaking point.

Anyone who has ever tried to find out what it might cost to get a pair of glasses, or to hire a lawyer to draw up a will or handle a divorce for the least amount would welcome an opportunity to shop for these services much as they would approach the purchase of a house, car or household appliance.

Allowing doctors and lawyers to advertise their services is a logical extension of the free enterprise system of freedom of choice and open competition that has made America the greatest nation on earth.

Prepaid health care

Let's hope the Carter administration has more success than its predecessors in trying to stimulate the growth of prepaid health care in the United States.

At one time, prepaid medicine — patterned after the Kaiser Plan in California — was thought to be the wave of the future. Families would pay a fixed monthly fee for all their health care, ranging from routine checkups to expensive surgery. Doctors, druggists and hospitals would band together to provide that care at the lowest possible cost.

President Nixon predicted in 1971 that federal seed money would enable as many as 40 million Americans to enroll in these so-called health maintenance organizations (HMOS) by 1976.

As it turned out, this didn't happen. Only 6.5 million are enrolled in HMOs, and the federal aid program is bogged down in bureaucratic red tape.

Carter's health planners, aided by some 1976 changes in the law, now say they're determined to get the HMO program back on the track. Which is good news if they can do it.

For it seems that prepaid medicine tends to hold down health care costs in the long run. Because doctors get their money in a salary instead of a fee for each service, there is just as much emphasis on keeping patients healthy as on treating them when they're sick.

One study found, for example, that federal workers enrolled in regular health insurance plans spent nearly twice as many days in hospitals as federal workers in HMO plans whose medical fees had been paid in advance.

Drowning in laws

Dear Editor:

Your editorial writer tried to sugar-coat socialized medicine, July 20, but some things can't be sugar-coated because of the bitter truth.

True, medical costs are high like everything else, but why not point out the cause? Instead, he parroted the Secretary of socialist Health, Education and Welfare who says more socialism will cure Socialism. And why blame the anti-socialist American Medical Association for seeing that socialism is a sin? If that writer's wife were sick with a cold, he'd want to cure her with pneumonia.

Socialism is government regulation: Congressman Philip Crane (R-Ill.) informs us that government regulation now costs the economy as much as $150 billion a year. Do you begin to see why all costs are high, Mr. Socialist?

Let's be more specific about current regulation: We are literally being drowned in laws. In less than one month the current Congress succeeded in introducing 3,298 prospective new laws in the House and 624 in the Senate. The Federal Register contains regulations which have the force of law. Since 1970, its volume has increased by 25 per cent annually. Last year its new regulations and interpretations contained 67,027 pages of fine print. That's more than double the pages in the Encyclopedia Britannica!

Let those worried about costs answer this question: Does America need Socialist editorial writers or less government?

Nursing home irregularities

AUSTIN, Texas — Big, booming Bill Moore, known in these parts as the "Bull of Brazos County," is the most powerful senator in the Texas legislature. He dominates the Senate's backrooms, where he works his will with the finesse of a prize Texas bull. He is a one-man stampede, who simply tramples down his opposition.

Moore is also an oil baron, banker and businessman, with his fingers in 20 major corporations. One of his unadvertised enterprises is the Sherwood Nursing Home in Bryan, Texas.

The silent, shuffling old people who stay at Sherwood don't live as well as their host. State inspectors have found "dirty enema cans and bedpans on bedside tables." Human excrement, according to the records, has been observed on the floors. The inspectors reported that one room had "an extremely strong urine odor." The sanitation, maintenance and housekeeping procedures were also found to be "totally inadequate."

Patients received no care in the morning. "Oxygen tanks," the records added, "were left running." Far more serious, there were "no signatures of licensed nurses on medications" administered to patients. And prescribed treatments for the elderly, according to the records, weren't being carried out.

Few state officials want to arouse the wrath of the Bull of Brazos County. They kept putting off action against Moore's facility. But the violations became so blatant in 1975 that Welfare Commissioner Raymond Vowell finally notified Moore in a letter that his nursing home had violated its contract and that its payments would be suspended.

The letter was a courtesy; most owners don't receive polite notice. But Moore wasn't mullified. He raised an almighty howl. He allegedly threatened to retaliate against the Welfare Dept. According to knowledgeable sources, he angrily threatened to begin by cutting the department's budget. He might even remove nursing homes from the department's jurisdiction, he warned.

This was followed by quiet pressure on the inspectors to view Moore's convalescent home through rosier glasses. But a subsequent inspection indicated that the living conditions at Sherwood hadn't improved. Here are just a few excerpts from the inspection report:

"Patient given an enema and left unattended . . . Patient had expelled the enema and was lying in feces . . . Complete baths were not being given as often as required, and bowel eliminations were recorded sometimes six days apart."

The inspectors, sniffing the air delicately, also reported the strong odor of urine. They saw patients, covered only by thin sheets, being wheeled around the halls. Salt was also being fed to patients on low salt diets. Their conclusion: The facility "continues to require a great deal of improvement."

Yet Vowell rushed off a letter to Moore, not to condemn him for the deplorable conditions, but to assure him that all payments to the nursing home would be restored. It was a friendly letter, signed "Raymond."

The Bull of Brazos, puffing furiously on his pipe, defended himself in an interview with our associate Howie Kurtz. Moore insisted he had never had any problems with his nursing home. "It's as fine as any facility in Texas," he snorted. "We're performing a public service and I'm proud of it."

Moore repeatedly denied the payments to his nursing home had ever been suspended. When Kurtz showed him documentary evidence, the senator conceded: "I do vaguely remember it now. It was during the legislative session and I was very busy."

His ruddy face turned redder when he was asked about the pressure on Vowell. "That is a damn lie!" he roared. "I have never put pressure on any state employee. Do you think I'm stupid?"

He said he wasn't involved in the daily operation of the home and had never talked to Vowell about it. "I don't remember any conversation," he growled.

But the balding, hawk-faced Vowell told Kurtz a slightly different story. The commissioner acknowledged that - Moore had spoken to him. "I know Bill Moore for 30 years," said Vowell. "I told him what the recommendations were. He said, 'You can't treat me any differently than anyone else.'"

The Lance case

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The unusual financial problems of millionaire White House adviser Thomas B. (Bert) Lance have been reported in inordinate detail, but not enough attention has been paid to the financial arrangement established to manage his fortune during government service.

When Lance accepted President Carter's invitation to become director of the Office of Management and Budget, he agreed to place most of his holdings, then valued at more than $7 million, in a "blind trust" to be administered by a businessman identified only as Thomas Mitchell.

As part of the Carter administration's campaign to emphasize the importance of public officials' integrity, Lance's relationship with Mitchell was scrutinized by attorney John L. Moore, a member of the Carter legal staff.

Mitchell "is not related to you by blood or marriage, is not your employee, is not the employee of a corporation the voting stock of which is held by you, and is not a subordinate employee of a corporation of which you are an executive officer," Moore wrote to Lance.

Having applied that standard test, used for the financial trusts established by all administration officials, Moore concluded "that Mitchell is an 'independent trustee' as required by the Guidelines on Conflicts-of-Interest published by the Carter-Mondale Transition Group."

But there are serious questions about Mitchell's purported "independence" from Lance, going well beyond the fact that the two men have been virtual neighbors in northeast Georgia (Mitchell lives in Dalton, only 20 miles north of Lance's home town of Calhoun) and close personal friends for many years.

When Carter sought (unsuccessfully) to promote Lance as his successor as Georgia's governor, Mitchell was a key member of Lance's 1974 campaign organization. "Tom worked very closely with Bert," says one man who followed that race.

Most important is the fact that Mitchell is — by his own admission — the fourth largest individual stockholder in the National Bank of Georgia (NBG), an Atlanta financial institution in which Lance owns 200,000 shares once valued at almost $3 million.

Mitchell declines to specify the extent of his NBG holdings, but if his investment is similar to that of other major shareholders his interest presumably exceeds $1 million.

Lance's original trust agreement required Mitchell to sell all of Lance's NBG stock by the end of this year. But the prospect of such a large block of shares being dumped on the market, coupled with the bank's unexpected losses in real estate loans, has greatly depressed the price of NBG stock.

"I'm not going to dispose of that stock at current market value come Dec. 31 or any other time. I'm not going to drop Bert a million dollars for going to Washington," trustee Mitchell recently told an interviewer.

What Mitchell didn't mention is that he has a potentially serious conflict of interest because putting Lance's NBG stock up for sale would undoubtedly further depress the value of Mitchell's sizable NBG holdings.

Someone in the White House may have belatedly recognized that problem because Carter's recent proposal to allow Lance to hold his NBG stock beyond Dec. 31 contains a little-noticed provision calling for transfer of those shares to another trust, run by "a new qualified corporate trustee."

But Mitchell will retain control over the remainder of Lance's investments, including more than million worth of stock in the Calhoun (Ga.) First National Bank. The trust agreement requires sale of some of those shares, and again there are problems with Mitchell's supposed "independence" because he is a major investor in various, unnamed banks, also in northwest Georgia.

The trust agreement with Mitchell ought to be scrapped and a new, truly independent trustee found for Lance, because the current arrangement typifies the tendency of Carter administration rhetoric about "good government" to outpace its performance in that crucial field.

Just in jest

It doesn't necessarily take an economist to point out what's wrong with this country financially.

"The sorry mess we are now in has all been brought about by the way we men are kowtowing to women's so called rights," one worried male complains bitterly. "And if you don't think the situation is desperate, consider this: — Once the ratio was 5 men to 1 woman but today our banks are employing only 1 man to 5 women. What's more, (Already it has happened in some instances) it won't be long before those same banks decide it will be politically expedient to take the MAN out of MANagement. And I don't have to remind you married men what a catastrophe that would be. Imagine having to convince a woman every time you wanted to float a loan! Even the old time banker with his glass eye and ice water in his veins would be welcome relief from all the bankHERS we are forced to deal with today."

Reflections on a mastectomy

Dear Ann Landers: Is a mastectomy really necessary? After having had one I feel as if I were rushed into it. Now I have some strong regrets and am, in fact, very depressed.

Since you have access to top medical authorities, will you please check this out for me? What is the medical world thinking now? Are there other treatments for breast cancer? — Waiting For An Answer

Dear Waiting: Chances are very good that the mastectomy saved your life. I suggest you have a talk with your surgeon and let him explain to you exactly why your breast had to be removed.

Many women who have had mastectomies become depressed. I urge you to contact Reach for Recovery. (Look in the phone book or ask your doctor.) This group is composed of women who have gone through the same thing and they can be immensely supportive.

The following letter appeared June 2, 1974. I think it might be of interest to you.

Dear Ann Landers: I was deeply disturbed by that letter signed "Too Late and Plenty Sorry." The woman had had a breast removed and was seething with resentment against the doctor who "talked her into having that horrible operation that deprived her of her womanliness and left her mutilated and ugly." She asked, "What man would want me now?"

I agree with you, Ann — she should get down on her knees and thank God her cancerous breast was removed so her life could continue.

I had a breast removed almost three years ago, and as the national co-chairman of the 1974 Cancer Crusade, I have traveled to all parts of the country and met hundreds of women who have had the same operation.

Breast cancer strikes one out of every 15 women, and more of us now survive than ever before, so there are a great many of us around. But you'd have a hard time picking us out of a crowd — especially when we model in fashion shows, wear bathing suits and participate in all sorts of competitive sports.

The woman's concern about her "love life" is needless. Most mastectomy patients have told me that it made no difference whatever to their husbands. Often it brings them closer together. When they walk through the valley of death, hand in hand, the mate becomes even more dear than before.

To those women who have had a mastectomy while young and unmarried, I say, none of us know what tragedies life holds — maiming accident on the job, a crippling car wreck or blindness from disease. Who would want a "fair-weather friend" for a husband? If a missing breast would matter, it is better to know in advance and shun such an inconsiderate, unfeeling person.

I agree with you, Ann: "Any woman who loses a husband for this reason hasn't lost much." — Mrs. Birch Bayh Of Indiana

How do trees heal themselves?

Not too hard to understand how extreme cold can cause some trees to split wide open. I've seen those trunk wounds big enough to stick your hand into. What's a little harder to understand, at least at this desk, is how those wounds can close up and become invisible in just a matter of hours.

If you had to do without one meal a day, which would you give up? When young people were asked that question, they all said breakfast. When elderly people were asked, most said supper.

Repeated studies prove that supermarket checkers tend to undercharge more often than overcharge.

HALO

Q. "How did the halo that angels supposedly wear come to be so called?"

A. The ancient Greeks threshed their grain by heaping it in a ring on level hard ground and then driving oxen over it repeatedly. Halo is what the Greeks called that circular rut the oxen made. Astronomers later revived the word to apply to rings around celestial bodies. Only later did the theologians take it over to crown their saints with it.

Q. "How would you describe the typical Indonesian?"

A. There's no such character, evidently. Indonesians speak 10 major languages in at least 60 different dialects. They're divided up into nine distinct ethnic groups with four religions. I give up.

Q. "Where do most couples, who eventually marry, first meet?"

A. In schools, that's No. 1. And No. 2 is in the homes of mutual friends.

ENDURANCE

If you were asked to name the Hollywood leading man who has survived to keep his good looks the longest, who might you suggest? How about David Niven? No, maybe John Wayne. Then there's Hope and Crosby. Well, that's about it, unless you can think of anybody else.

Among college students who get caught stealing things, the freshmen and sophomores far outnumber the juniors and seniors. And predictably maybe, a lot more young men than women thieve. Also, the records indicate a definite pattern wherein big-city boys tend to swipe from small-town students, much moreso than vice versa.

Rat with lump should see vet

DEAR DR. MILLER: Shiva is our 2-year-old white rat. In recent months, he's developed a soft lump on his right jaw. He seems to like us to rub it every evening when we hold him and let him play. However, it's getting larger, and he acts more lethargic every day. We realize his normal lifespan is almost up, but is the lump something we should attend to or worry about? — J.J.

DEAR J.J.: Shiva should be seen by a doctor, and soon. Maybe he can still help. If so, Shiva should or could be good for enjoyable evenings by the hundreds yet. The lump's most likely (though not necessarily) a tumor, and surgery might still save him. You can bet that worry won't.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I found two little things in my puppy's mouth which look just like warts. They seem to bother him not at all, but I'm wondering what they may be. — E.R.

DEAR E.R.: They would be — warts. Virus-caused warts in puppies will usually disappear without any treatment. When present in very large numbers or when causing problems, they should be attended to by your veterinarian.

A Word To The Wise — If you have a perplexing pet problem, then write — but not if a real, existing medical problem is involved. Not being on the scene, I can provide answers that apply only in a general sense. Certainly my column is not designed to give, nor can it, specific information concerning your ailing pet's physical trouble.

Any veterinarian, including this one, needs to examine an animal personally before he can offer an opinion on what is bothering that specific pet. (For that matter, a physical examination is frequently not enough — a laboratory workup, X-rays, etc. may be required to diagnose and to recommend appropriate treatment.) This is why your veterinarian cannot give specific opinions over the phone nor, even more to the point, can I make such an attempt by mail. Yet all-too-often I receive letters such as: "For the last two days my old dog hasn't been able to get up and he's breathing awfully hard. What should I do?" A local veterinarian receiving such a call could only say rush the animal down and we'll see what we can do, but to depend on the postal service at all in a medical emergency is tragically unrealistic.

Careless market cart drivers

There is some talk that the driving age of shoppers operating supermarket carts is being raised to 35. I should know. I'm doing the talking.

Going to the supermarket used to be an adventure. Today, it's a combat mission.

As I was telling my friend, Gloria, the other day over produce, "It's a jungle out there what with all the young, inexperienced drivers and little old ladies who only drive a shopping cart on Sundays after church."

"I know," said Gloria, "did you see that teen-ager just speed by? Barreling up and down the aisle hoisting a soft drink to her lips. When will they ever learn drink and shopping carts do not mix."

"What about the mother over there?" I cautioned. "I mean is she a menace? She has three children in the cart. One is eating the top off a cereal box, one throwing raw potatoes in the aisle of traffic and the other one sucking the pot roast. She couldn't possibly be looking where she is going."

"If that isn't the truth," sighed Gloria, "I was following a senior citizen down pickles and spices. She was going along at a browsing speed so I figured it was safe to pass. At the end of the aisle, she made a sharp left and I nearly ended up in facial tissue."

"Ummmm," I nodded, "What about the careless shoppers who leave their carts unattended for some young joy riders to steal and run the wheels off."

"I know what you mean," said Gloria. "Or the woman who stopped dead in front of me to fix a wheel that was going the wrong way."

"That is a bore though, Gloria, when three wheels want to shop and the other one wants to go to the parking lot."

"I guess, but she could have pulled over to the side to make repairs."

"Is it my imagination," I asked, "Or do there seem to be more men in the aisles today? They really shouldn't let them drive in a supermarket until they've had experience in a discount house or a garden center. They're inclined to panic and fall apart the first time they're rammed in the side."

"I noticed that. Well, it's back to the wars. Where's your cart?"

"Over there in front of meats blocking traffic. Where's yours?"

"Mine was towed away from the center of the aisle 20 minutes ago. Actually, it's the only way to get through this traffic."

Testing milk intolerance

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing to inquire about the intolerance to milk and milk products. Are there any tests that can confirm the intolerance?

I have tried checking with the pharmacies around here but with no results. I also tried to get through to the doctor I go to but couldn't get past the receptionist. She suggested I eliminate milk from my diet. She also asked if I had a blood test to prove it.

I had come to the conclusion that was what was bothering me by the process of elimination but I didn't know what the terminology was until I read one of your columns. Unwisely I had not saved the column with the address for Lact-Aid. Could you send me some information as I don't want to go through the rest of my life avoiding milk products or putting up with these symptoms when I break down and use some.

DEAR READER — Yes, there are tests to confirm lactose intolerance. One of these is related to ingesting lactose and testing the blood at intervals as you do with a glucose tolerance test to evaluate diabetes. Another is by means of measuring the hydrogen in the breath. I agree that you should avoid milk and all milk products to test your response. It is a simple practical solution. The receptionist was unrealistic in asking if you had had a blood test to prove it.

I presume you are having the usual gas, cramps and possibly diarrhea that so many adults who have lactose intolerance experience when they use appreciable amounts of milk. You may be able to get some relief from this by treating your milk with Lact-Aid (you can get it from SugarLo Co., 3540 Atlantic Avenue, Atlantic City, NY 08404). To give you a more complete picture of the lactose intolerance problem I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-2, Milk Products: Good and Bad. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

You can also use some of the soybean milk substitutes often used for children who cannot tolerate milk products. Recently I received a letter from a gastroenterologist to tell me that these products also contain lactose. I checked and found out this was not true, at least with the ones I am familiar with and usually recommend. A common one of these is ProSobee made by Mead Johnson. According to the Mead Johnson company there is no lactose at all in ProSobee.

The sugar used in it is sucrose (ordinary table sugar from cane or beet sources) and corn syrup. Both are rather far removed from lactose sugar produced from animals. You can find this product in many grocery stores in the infant food section. It is useful as a milk substitute and can be used on cereals.

Some milk intolerant people can use home made butter milk and cottage cheese, and yogurt. The souring process breaks down some of the lactose so the amount is decreased. Unfortunately many of the commercial products still contain lots of lactose and some commercial yogurt has added dry milk powder as a thickener which results in a high lactose product. You can expect trouble from using these.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column.

Astrographs

Your Birthday, August 1, 1977

The temptation to make changes affecting your basic lifestyle will be strong this coming year. They can work out well as long as they are not based on fantasy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Time is an important factor in your achievement today. Your chances for gain lessen in proportion to the time you spend dillydallying. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Snap decisions you make today are excellent, but you lack faith in your own judgment. Seeking other opinions only leads to confusion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Profit could slip through your fingers today because you tend to oversell. Once you get a "yes," pocket the contract and walk away.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Situations you control are your best stock in trade today. Where another can approve or disapprove what you do, this may not be the case.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You may impulsively do something today that benefits someone else. Don't doubt your judgment if an associate questions it. You're right. He's wrong.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Enjoy yourself today, but don't be talked out of doing things you should do. You'll feel very guilty if you let others lead you astray.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) An important goal is reachable today, but you may not effectively expend the concentrated effort needed. Don't spread your forces too thin.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your comprehension is quicker than that of others today, but you lack your usual patience with those slow on the uptake. Try to be tolerant.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might find yourself in a situation today where the road to success is clearly marked. Take care not to talk yourself out of this advantage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't automatically try a clever dodge that worked for a friend. You could wind up empty-handed and confused.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Innovative techniques won't work today if the wrong associates are involved. Everyone must understand thoroughly if you are to succeed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't gamble on anything outlandish today whereby an innocent party could suffer. If you must go down the pipe, do it all by yourself.

Whitebrook comes to life

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

It is always nice to hear from an old friend. Charley Whitebrook, who admits to being almost 70, is retired and living in Florida. He sent us today's hand with the comment, "Maybe there's life in the old boy."

Charley found himself in what can best be described as a very doubtful heart game. Not that he had overbid, but rather that the hand was a real misfit.

Charley won the spade in dummy, decided that West needed the king of hearts for his takeout double and therefore played ace and a small heart. This dropped the jack and king from West and Charley was in business with what we call a trump bye-pass play.

West led a second spade. Charley won in dummy, discarded a diamond, ruffed a spade and played the king of clubs. West took his ace and ruffed, cashed the ace and king of diamonds and queen of clubs and led a third diamond. He had eight tricks in and there was no way to keep him from making two more trump tricks.

On the last trick East had to use his 10 of trumps to ruff his partner's good club.

We can reassure him. Penalty tricks for a revoke are considered as tricks won by the non-offender.

Counseling Corner

Couple should aim to please

By R. CLIFF WATERS
Marriage and Family Counselor

Too many couples never have a good sexual relationship; others believe they had "until she gained 25 pounds," or "until he started bringing work home weekends from the office," or "until he started picking on me."

No matter what the problem or how long the difficulties have existed, if they are not confronted and overcome, the resulting poor relationship will fester and in the end destroy the marriage. The couple, at the very least, will be robbed of the richness of marriage harmony.

Many physicians, I believe, fail to realize the extent of their patients' misinformation and ignorance. Here I venture no criticism. Only after years of marriage counseling was I able to see how widespread this is. I sincerely hope that the sex education gradually being introduced into our schools will remedy this state of affairs.

I have learned that men and women get wrong ideas from various sources. Marriage manuals, romantic novels and the boasts of friends combine to give many women absurd ideas about sexual fulfillment. And when it is less than they think it should be, they condemn openly their husbands. The more truth there is in their condemnations, the less adequate the poor man is likely to feel.

There also are women, dissatisfied with the quality of their sexual relationships, who insist that their husbands go to a doctor for hormone shots. Could a little tact and loving understanding be administered to them, I suspect it would almost always serve their marriage better than hormones.

What are some of the qualities that make up good sexual adjustment?

One would be free and open communication without criticism. A desire — a need — to please the other along with a willingness to experiment seems very important to good sexual adjustment. Sexual techniques are usually better discovered than learned from a book.

Really good sexual adjustment involves practice and patience, as well as passion.

Tourists' dollars are worth less; prices rising rapidly

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — American tourists looking for bargains in Europe have to be choosy this summer: Their dollars often are worth less than last year and European prices are going up faster than at home.

But although the dollar is weak, an Associated Press survey shows that some European currencies are weaker still and Americans can take advantage of that.

Spain is one of their best bets. The number of American tourists traveling to Spain has been going down, and that may be one reason the Bank of Spain decided earlier this month to give them 873 pesetas for a $10 bill, instead of 699. That goes a long way now in Spain.

A medium-class hotel room costs as little as $6 now, a dollar less than before. A meal that used to cost $5 or $6 will only cost $4 to $5.

On the other hand an American finds prices in Scandinavia high. A glass of beer at the Tostrup Cafe in downtown Oslo will set him back $1.50. Some places have been known to charge twice as much.

In Copenhagen, a double room at the Royal Hotel costs $68 a day — without breakfast. Last year it was about $61. Still the Danish tourist office says it's expecting about 10 per cent more Americans this year, despite a substantial number of cancellations.

Yugoslavia is another place for bargain-hunters. Down toward the southern tip of the Adriatic coast is the old fishing village of Sveti Stefan, which now has one of the country's best hotels. A room with bath and a big breakfast costs $33 a day, same as last year.

Other hotels are a good deal cheaper than that, and Yugoslavia is expecting 200,000 Americans this year — about 20 per cent more than in 1976.

Sometimes local price increases are canceled out, at least in part, by cheap local currency. For example at Simpson's in London the traditional roast lamb, served with ceremony from a huge silver platter, has gone up to $6.45 from $6. The increase would have been considerably more except that the value of the British pound sterling has gone down.

Britain's Trust House Forte Hotel chain says its rooms have gone up about 15 per cent. At the Strand Palace, across from Simpson's, a single room on the cheaper side costs about $28 a night. A year ago it was about $25.50.

The pound sterling now is worth about $1.72 and at the rate there are still bargains in Britain. A front-row theater seat is $8.50, for example.

Italy has a roaring inflation and although the dollar is theoretically worth more than it was last year, it may buy the tourist a good deal less. A double room with bath in a popular, moderately priced Rome hotel that cost less than $20 last year is nearly $24 now.

But Italian prices still are low by American and North European standards, especially outside the big tourist centers, such as Rome and Florence.

In West Germany and Switzerland, as in the Scandinavian countries, an American faces a combination of higher prices and a lower dollar value. A look at the Rhine or Alps comes high these days. West German meals and hotel rooms have gone up an average of seven per cent and the mark has gone up over nine per cent. That means a visitor to West Germany has to spend $7 for every $6 he spent last year.

In Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark and Sweden, the value of the local currencies are tied to the West German mark and go up almost as fast. Whenever it does, the dollar is worth less.

The basic reason for the spread in costs is two-fold. The dollar has been falling on international exchanges lately because the United States has been buying a lot more goods abroad than it sells. European prices have been going up largely because of increased labor costs. Not only does the average European earn more money these days, his employer is paying a good deal more in social security taxes.

Those Americans who visit Eastern Europe find that a Communist government doesn't make things any easier for them by controlling prices and exchange rates. Bed, breakfast and lunch at a good hotel in Prague can cost $70 a day.

hard medical and emotional decision to make many times.

"Who is to say when a service, which is available, should be withheld?" he asks.

The problems of high medical costs, too many beds, duplication of services and possible mismanagement are not unique to California.

The Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences issued a report stating that about nine per cent of the nation's hospital beds were in excess of the needs of the country.

The institute suggests the government offer hospitals some sort of incentives for cutting costs, including some sort of lump sum payment through Medicare or Medi-Cal.

"We do need to avoid duplications which have crept into the system," Burwell agrees. "Maybe the Health Systems Agency mechanism could be effective.

"There is a need for some incentive for individual hospitals to do all they can to be efficient. So far, actions have been negative.

"If we are about to make a mistake, however, it's trying to bring things into line overnight by leaning upon one section of the health picture. We must allow for inflation, but I see no reason why hospitals can't live within the current economic picture," adds the administrator.

"The public has a right to be assured of the best medical care possible and to continued protection, but I'm not really sure how to do it."

Albania threatens split with China

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Tiny Albania has asked China to withdraw its technical advisers, threatening collapse of the 16-year alliance that gave China its only beachhead in Europe, diplomatic sources here said.

The informants said the request was made through the Chinese Embassy in the Albanian capital of Tirana. Between 700 and 2,000 Chinese technical experts are believed to be in Albania, the sources said.

Albania, a Balkan nation smaller than the State of Maine and one with a reputation for going it alone, chose to ally itself with the world's most populous nation in 1961.

Maverick artist

"I dedicated this to a black forest firefighter from the California Institution for Men I once saw standing silently upon Mt. Baldy waiting to go into battle," Chase said. "I was impressed by the black man in prison brought up here to fight the fire caused by a white man not in prison."

Another of the front yard upright (not illegal horizontal) sculptures is a labor of his and his grandchildren's hammer and chiseling several years ago. Chase said a neighbor's tree blew down the night before Easter and he dragged it to his front yard with his car.

The next day, he and his grandchildren decided to sculpt a primitive face into it. "Once we were through with it, I stood it upright," said Chase.

"One of my grandchildren asked me why I stood it up. I told her that it showed that something that was felled could rise again. I thought that was rather appropriate on Easter," said Chase.

Nudity controversy

A hearing is set Aug. 8 and 9 before the Zoning Board of the Los Angeles County Regional Planning Commission to determine whether the operation should be allowed to continue: whether the place is a growth center or a nudist camp, whether it is in violation of zoning ordinances, and how long it should be allowed to stay open to allow its backers to get a fair return on their investments.

The investors say they have been unable to get a sufficient return on their money for the past five years. They claim Elysium is just beginning to pay off and they need 18 more years to get their money out.

Paul McCarthy, the regional planner who handles the case for the zoning board, says more than 30 hours of testimony has already been received from the two sides, making the case the longest in the history of the county and probably the state.

Although the basic issue is that of amortizing the investment, the board, in a broad view of the entire controversy, has allowed the residents to open up the whole case of nonconformity as to use of the premises and the buildings themselves with their dozen showers, Olympic size swim pool, whirlpool and sauna.

They contend not only that Elysium is in the wrong zone, but also that attendance there, particularly on the weekend, causes traffic problems and fire hazards.

Harvey T. Anderson, a former Los Angeles County assistant fire chief, the leader of the faction against the field, contends that the presence of so many people in one place in the otherwise undeveloped canyon adds "immeasurably to the possibility of a large fire that would spread unchecked."

But behind all those concerns is the issue of nudism.

Although the field has put up physical barriers, the neighbors contend they can still see the nudist scene. And they don't like what they see.

Lange readily admits that there is more than sunbathing at Elysium: he has tennis courts, a badminton court and other recreational activities. But he insists there is no open sex.

Not that he is against sex, but his feeling is that sexual activities are a private matter between consenting adults, and as such should be done in private.

"We are all sexual beings," he explains. "Those who deny their sexuality develop attitudes of aggressiveness, with a hidden agenda of inadequacy, incompetence and anxiety."

He contends there is no growth without self-acceptance.

His position is backed by an advisory board which includes professionals in medicine, psychology, psychiatry, the church, law, and the arts. One of the advisers is psychologist George Bach who has written several popular books including the best seller "Intimate Enemy."

The Elysium Institute, which runs the program, also issues a quarterly house organ with a circulation of 15,000.

Why is Elysium Field unique?

Lange claims it is the only place in the world which allows the family to participate in a clothing optional setting that combines both education and recreation.

There are no radios, no tape recorders, no cameras. And there is a meditation garden in which no one is allowed to break the silence.

Luring corporate wealth to Atlanta

Young stranger camping in the middle of Manhattan

EDITOR'S NOTE: Many states and regions long have had an eye on New York City's corporate wealth and have sought to lure it through parttime emmissaries or annual junkets by state officials. But none has attracted the attention, or suspicion, as has a young fellow from Atlanta who set up permanent camp smack in the middle of Manhattan. He personifies the growing struggle between the emerging sunbelt and the waning snowbelt.

NEW YORK (AP) — The good townspeople already were aflutter when the young stranger with the accent came riding in.

Many of their biggest and richest neighbors had fled to the hills of Connecticut, and they didn't look kindly on this newcomer and tales of still greener pastures.

The stranger was Alexander P. Gaines Jr., a real estate salesman from Atlanta, sent by its Chamber of Commerce to lure some of New York's commerce their way.

That was five months ago. Alex Gaines hasn't stolen any corporations yet, and he may never. But he has learned first hand why some companies decide to leave New York — the city has lost more than a half-million jobs in the past eight years — and how people who grow restless and look for a challenge, as he did in Atlanta, find it in New York.

His apartment is on a fashionable street near the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Central Park jogging path which he tours in the wee hours each morning. But it's only half as large, and costs $125 a month more, than his last apartment in Atlanta.

And at night, when he explores the cafes of Greenwich Village, he has to watch it. Soon after his arrival, he bought a beer for a friend and one for himself (an indulgence permitted by the daily jogging, he says) and the tab was $5.76.

"You can buy a case of beer in Atlanta for that.

"This is one of the major problems of New York. Corporations have a hard time getting somebody like me to come into New York. If you have a kid, you're talking about $650 a month for an apartment. It's tough to raise a child. Connecticut's been able to breed off New York because of it."

Gaines feeds his clients facts and figures on income and real estate taxes in Atlanta, availability of land, transportation routes, climate, potential markets in the Southeast, and wage costs.

"I don't talk down New York," he said. "I'll never do that. I'm not here to convince a corporation to move from New York, but I'll talk to them if they want to. We're not here to pick on New York. Its survival is important to every other city.

"New York is a beautiful city. It's got the worst and the best of everything. If you hate New York, you hate the world, because it's got everything in the world."

For another thing, his mission is not so much to steal the headquarters of a corporation as to steer to Atlanta a company already planning a southern branch. His hunting ground extends beyond New York, from Baltimore to Boston.

ENVOY — Fast becoming a dedicated New Yorker, Alex Gaines goes for an early morning jog past the Metropolitan Museum on Fifth Avenue near his apartment. He's been in New York five months now as ambassador from the Atlanta, Ga., Chamber of Commerce and he hasn't stolen any corporations yet. But he has learned why a lot of corporations leave.

Part of the job is ensuring that companies already in Atlanta stay there. Gaines says that 430 of the 500 largest industrial firms have some kind of operation in Atlanta.

Decisions by big, well-known corporations to move their headquarters from New York draw much publicity, but they are not the city's biggest problem, according to Frank Corbin of the city's Economic Development Administration.

Their exodus in recent years has accounted for only about 10 per cent of the city's loss of 650,000 jobs since 1969, Corbin says. Bankruptcies and layoffs among small companies are the real problem. Of the 190,000 businesses in the city, 98 per cent have fewer than 100 employes and 90 per cent have fewer than 20.

City officials have never counted the states or regions that stalk business prey on their streets, most through share representatives or public relations firms or annual junkets to New York. None has drawn the attention Gaines has, however.

And New York soon will have its own Alex Gaineses on the road: A traveling ambassador corps of executives is included in plans for a multimillion-dollar campaign to sell businessmen elsewhere on the idea of moving to the city.

Taking a slow train to past

ROCKHILL FURNACE, Pa. (AP) — Once destined for the junkyard, the East Broad Top Railroad has scraped the rust off its steam-powered relics to keep the golden era of railroading alive.

Puffing wisps of smoke and clanging its brass bell, an 80-ton black locomotive wheezes its way through the mountains of south-central Pennsylvania on the oldest section of narrow gauge track in the country.

Tickets pushed through the wire cages of the quaint Orbisonia Station earn a seat on one of four dark green wooden passenger cars. After the conductor's cry of "Bo-o-o-ard!," the whistling engine begins an excursion into yesteryear.

"We're pretty antique, even the people who run it," said 74-year-old C.R. Wilburn, the Eastie's operating vice president and a railroad man for 48 years.

As a hauler of soft coal from the rich veins of Huntingdon County, the East Broad Top ran over 32 miles of track. The railroad, registered as a National Historic Landmark, now clickety-clacks on a 10-mile romp strictly for the pleasure of tourists.

The rails are 36 inches apart, compared to the standard gauge of 4 feet, 8½ inches first used by the Pennsylvania Railroad. No other narrow gauge railroad is operating east of the Mississippi.

At one time, 194 narrow gauge companies existed. The slimmer lines were cheaper to build.

The Eastie's first section of track was laid in 1873. It continued as a coal hauler with some passenger service until 1956, when the Kovalchick Salvage Co. bought it for scrap.

"I hated to see it go, but I had no other alternative," said Wilburn, a former engineer.

Everyone expected to see the six engines built by the Baldwin Locomotive Co. of Philadelphia and the rest of Eastie's equipment at the brick railyard chopped up and hauled away.

But Nick Kovalchick, the new owner, decided to keep the railroad alive as a working museum. Its first 50-minute tourist trip through the picturesque Aughwick Valley was June 9, 1960.

Four of the six engines are operable today. They are stored and maintained in a red brick roundhouse. The station, which contains a pot-bellied stove, an old telegraph wire and other antiques, now houses a souvenir shop and snack bar.

About 30,000 visitors a year board the open platformed cars, which date back to 1882, for the trip to tranquil Colgate Grove and back.

One car reportedly used by President Grover Cleveland has plush red lining, varnished seats, elaborate brass railings and highly polished spitoons.

"People come to spend the day, go on a picnic or just browse around. The kids get a real kick out it. Most of the time their grandparents bring them for a ride, and you can't get them off," said Wilburn.

Sodium nitrite cancer risk?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Agriculture Department official says it is time for a closer look at the potential cancer risks of using sodium nitrite to cure meat.

Bacon, hams, hot dogs and many other meat and poultry products are treated with nitrite to prevent the growth of bacteria that can cause botulism, a deadly food poison. It also is added to give the products an appetizing rosy color.

But under certain conditions, such as in frying bacon with high heat or in the normal human digestive process, nitrite can combine with other substances to form a nitrosamine, which some authorities say is among the most potent of cancer-causing agents.

A panel of experts originated by the Agriculture Department nearly three years ago meets today to examine evidence relating to nitrites and cancer.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman heads the panel. She recently added four new members to the panel, including three cancer research scientists.

Ms. Foreman, as she prefers to be called, said she expects "some clashes" among panel members regarding nitrite and cancer.

"I'm also trying to do this decision-making in the calmest possible fashion, without having people go galloping off screaming in every direction," she said in an interview.

"It's very hard. The industry people are upset and the consumers — if you start saying to them 'eat bacon and you're going to get cancer' — are going to be upset."

A 1972 suit filed by the Center for Science in the Public Interest asked that the chemical be banned as potentialy carcinogenic and because substitutes for curing meat are available.

Ms. Foreman said the court dismissed the case on procedural grounds without ruling on the claims. As a result, the expert panel was set up to assess the impact of nitrites on the food supply.

But she said the panel has not faced the cancer issue suuarely and, until now, focused on benefits of nitrite in preventing botulism.

"I don't want to frighten people unnecessarily, but I'm sworn to uphold the law that prohibits the adulteration of meat and poultry products, and I want to make absolutely certain that we carry that law out," Ms. Foreman said.

Ms. Foreman expects the panel's final report by Sept. 30.

"I would hope that they will be able to show a direction that will be clear and easily accomplished, but I'm not totally hopeful that either of those things will be happen," she said.

Even if the panel makes a firm recommendation on use of nitrites, it will be months before the department makes a decision on reducing or eliminating the chemical in meat and poultry. It is also possible the department will do nothing after the panel's report.

Ms. Foreman, however, guessed the department will draft some proposed new rules for nitrite and that "extensive comments" from consumers and the food industry will be aired at public hearings and in statements submitted during the rule-making process.

Legislation is introduced

Artist's tearful protest spurs 'taxation' change

WASHINGTON (AP) — A little over a year ago, the aging artist Ted DeGrazia went up into the Superstition Mountains outside of Phoenix, Ariz., and set fire to 100 of his paintings with an estimated value of $1.5 million.

With tears welling up in his eyes, according to witnesses, he planted two white Indian crosses in a ritualized protest against federal tax policies.

DeGrazia was calling attention to a form of double taxation on bequeathed art works that he said could end up costing his heirs a bundle of money.

The protest has not gone unheeded in Washington.

Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., has introduced legislation that could save heirs to art fortunes hundreds of thousands of dollars in taxes.

Under the current system, the heir must pay an estate tax on inherited art which can amount to 50 per cent of its estimated value. When the work is sold to cover that tax, the seller must then pay an income tax on the price which can reach 70 per cent.

Richmond, a wealthy art collector himself, contended his bill would help preserve art works for the general public.

"America is losing thousands of valuable works of art each year as artists destroy their works rather than place an untold financial burden on their families," said the Brooklyn Democrat.

When asked for examples, the only case he offered was that of DeGrazia, who last year at age 67 said he couldn't find a suitable institution to give his unsold works to and so burned them.

Reuben Goerwitz, a New York accountant who has helped advise Richmond on the legislation, said the current law is so unfair that his advice to inheritors of high-priced works would be "hide the art. You can never raise enough to pay for it."

Goerwitz, offering a hypothetical example, said "if an artist dies and left $1 million in art in his estate, a single heir living in New York would be taxed $985,448 by the fourth year and he would still owe $61,000."

Goerwitz said the combined state and federal estate taxes would be $337,000. But for the heir to raise that money by selling the inherited paintings, he would have to pay another $256,000 in income taxes. To cover that tax, he would have to sell more paintings and so on until the inheritance was exhausted.

Richmond, a millionaire who owns an extensive collection of 18th century porcelains and furniture and 19th and 20th century paintings, proposes to tax the estate of artists only for the value of the materials.

In other words, instead of millions of dollars, the tax would be based on the cost of paint and canvas — which is unlikely to be more than a couple of hundred dollars at most.

"My bill is specifically aimed at the bequests of artists," Richmond said. "The value of the work shouldn't be established until it's sold."

The proposal has been warmly praised by a number of celebrated artists, including some like Robert Rauschenberg and Jamie Wyeth whose remarks have been entered in the Congressional Record.

"The irony of an artist not to be able to afford being alive or dead can be creatively altered by the passing of this bill," said Rauschenberg. "Everyone survives in this change in the law, and even the deceased is comforted."

Wyeth, whose top works may bring an average quarter of a million dollars, said the bill would encourage preservation of art works.

At present, he said, "the real losers in this situation are our public institutions, libraries and museums and thus the American people."

MAKING FRIENDS — President Carter holds 2-year-old Cecily Baskir, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Baskir of Chevy Chase, Md., during a picnic on the South Lawn of the White House this week. The First Family hosted the gathering for members of Congress, White House staff members and their families.

Guru's powers under study

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Followers of a transcendental meditation guru who run a university here claim they can teach people to fly, for a price. But the head of Iowa's Consumer Protection Division has some doubts about the meditate - and - levitate course.

"I'm very skeptical they can teach people to float around the room and become invisible and I'd like to see evidence they can do that," said Julian Garrett, head of the protection division in the state attorney general's office.

Garrett said in an interview that his office initiated a study of claims by Maharishi International University (MIU) when a summer student at the university filed a false advertising complaint recently.

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi is the leader of the Transcendental Movement and his followers operate the university.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Carol Egley of the protection division said Friday that her office has not been able to contact the school's administration "because they tell us they are traveling."

The student, political science professor Dr. Stephen Rozman, 36, from Tougaloo College in Jackson, Miss., said he paid $2,970 in advance for the program that he believed was to include six weeks of preparatory courses and four weeks in the new levitation program.

Rozman said he learned of the program through a newspaper advertisement, which read in part, "The ability to levitate by mere intention will be the measure of the student's success in this 10-week course."

He said after the six weeks of preparatory work and the day before the levitation program was to begin, students were told it would take eight weeks instead of four and that levitation would be taught only during the last half of the period.

The additional four weeks increased the cost by $1,500, Rozman said, adding, "I know people who have used their life savings or taken out loans to come here for this summer training. I think it is fraudulent and contrary to their advertisements."

Rozman said he was dropped from the program after he questioned the extension and whether the advertising would cause legal problems. "They became very hostile and said, 'Maharishi himself gave the wording for the ad and the Maharishi doesn't make mistakes.'"

Rozman said he was told he could continue his preparatory work for two weeks, be re-evaluated and then might be allowed to take the levitation course.

"At that point, I asked for my money back," Rozman said. He said $1,500 was returned, but he contends he should be reimbursed for the money he spent on the preparatory work.

Steve Shimer, the course instructor, denied Rozman's charges. He said the program is individualized and that the students must move at their own rate, with some requiring additional time.

"It's a very delicate training," Shimer said.

He said Rozman completed six weeks of the preparatory training but was not qualified to move to the levitation phase of the program.

Big 1st inning paces Dodgers

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

MONTREAL — On a night turned chilly by gusty winds and a sudden temperature drop, the Dodgers cooled off as fast as the temperature but made a seven-run first inning stand up.

The Angelenos' 7-4 win over the Montreal Expos moved them 14 games ahead of the sinking Cincinnati Reds, who dropped below .500 at 50-51.

Rick Rhoden (12-7) had a 7-0 lead and a three-run homer before ever throwing a pitch Saturday night before 34,435 at Olympic Stadium.

Jackie Brown (7-8), who tormented the Dodgers in a 2-1 win in Los Angeles, couldn't get the ball over. When he did, he made his pitches too good and the Dodgers banged the ball around freely.

Davey Lopes, who stole his 33rd, 34th and 35th bases to tie for the league lead, started it off with a walk (also the first of three) and stole second.

Bill Russell flied out, but Brown walked Reggie Smith and Ron Cey to load the bases.

Steve Garvey hit Brown's first offering for a two-run single and Dusty Baker followed with a two-run double. Joe Simpson blooped a single to center and Fred Holdsworth replaced Brown.

Simpson stole second as Steve Yeager fanned and that brought up Rhoden who lined a 2-2 pitch over the leftfield fence for his second homerun of the season and third of his career.

"I was looking for a curveball and he threw me three straight fastballs before I finally got the curve," said Rhoden. "It was a great start but, after that, everything was downhill."

When Holdsworth also walked Lopes and Russell (the fourth and fifth walks of the inning), Rhoden went out to warm up again in the leftfield bullpen. The half-inning was already 25-minutes old.

Smith ended the inning, 28 minutes after it began, with a fly to center.

The Dodgers got only four more hits, two each in the second and sixth innings off Holdsworth, Santo Alcala, Don Stanhouse and Bill Atkinson.

Montreal picked up a run in its half of the first on Dave Cash's triple and Tony Perez's single. Wayne Garrett's leadoff double and Cash's RBI-single in the fifth made it 7-2.

In between, Perez hit a leadoff double in the fourth and advanced to third on a wild pitch. However, he was forced at the plate on Gary Carter's bouncer to Cey.

Doubleplays ended a threat in the third and kept the Expos from scoring more than once in the fifth.

When Carter hit his 16th roundtripper to lead off the Montreal seventh and Andre Dawson and Garrett followed with singles, manager Tommy Lasorda had seen enough.

"Rick was losing his stuff," said Lasorda. "I thought I'd gotten him out of there before he was hurt too much. He was losing what fastball he had."

Rhoden admitted he didn't have his best stuff.

"I didn't feel comfortable from the start," he said. "I was getting the ball high and they finally caught up with me."

Rhoden prefers four days between starts.

"Three other times I've started with only three days rest. Each time I haven't been strong and I've lost my stuff by the seventh inning."

"He probably lost some of his strength hitting that homer," cracked Lasorda.

Lance Rautzhan replaced Rhoden and got pinch-hitter Jose Morales to ground out advancing the runners to second and third. Dawson scored on Cash's bouncer to Russell to make it 7-4.

When Chris Speier singled, sending Garrett to third, Mike Garman replaced Rautzhan and got Ellis Valentine to hit into a forceout at second.

Garman walked Perez to open the Expo eighth and had three-ball counts on four other batters, but kept Montreal away from the plate.

"I had trouble with the mound," explained Garman, who kept scraping mud from his shoes and drawing boos from the crowd. "I've been wearing short cleats ever since I had that groin pull.

"I can't afford to catch my foot. But I had trouble tonight because the short cleats wouldn't take hold. It's the first time I ever got booed for cleaning my shoes."

Friday night's rain didn't stop until Saturday noon and the teams weren't able to take batting or fielding practice. That, plus threatening skies Saturday night, held attendance down.

DODGER DATA — Burt Hooton (8-5) and Stan Bahnsen (6-3) are the probable starters for today's series and season finale between the two clubs.

The game will be televised on Channel 11 starting at 11:15 a.m.

Rick Monday's sore back caused him to miss his 24th game of the season. Monday last started July 13.

Red Sox blank skidding Halos

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

ANAHEIM — The Angels fell just short of the magic million mark in home attendance Saturday night.

That wasn't all the Angels fell short in.

Because of one bad inning, Nolan Ryan suffered his 10th defeat of the season in 24 decisions as his teammates could do little against the combined efforts of ageless Luis Tiant and rookie Bob Stanley.

The Boston Red Sox, battling the New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles for the top spot in the American League East, took its second straight of the weekend by blanking the Angels, 3-0.

Boston is always one of the top attractions at Anaheim Stadium and a paid turnout of 32,662, including many transplanted New Englanders, swelled the Angels' attendance count to 999,031, just shy of the million mark after only 50 home dates.

Unfortunately, the Angels aren't playing nearly as well as their fans are turning out as Saturday's loss puts the Halos 14 1/2 games behind the White Sox in the A.L. West.

The Angels had many opportunities Saturday to break through against Tiant but ended up leaving 10 runners on base.

Tiant was in big trouble in the second inning when he allowed a single to Gil Flores and walked Terry Humphrey and Jerry Remy to load the bases.

Manager Don Zimmer immediately took time to talk to his 36-year-old righthander, which surprised catcher Carlton Fisk.

"Carlton couldn't figure why I was concerned since we had a 3-0 lead," Zimmer said. "I told him this is the game since we're not liable to score again against Ryan."

Zimmer was correct as the Bosox got only two singles the rest of the way against Ryan.

But Tiant got Rance Mulliniks on a grounder to end the threat in the second and he stayed in there until Mulliniks literally knocked him out in the seventh.

Remy had just reached third base with one out in the seventh when he doubled and took an extra base on leftfielder Bernie Carbo's error.

Mulliniks followed with a line shot off of Tiant's right thumb. The pitcher was able to recover in time to throw him out at first but he also soon headed for the clubhouse. He was taken to a local hospital after the game for x-rays.

Stanley came in retire Bobby Bonds for the final out of the inning and hold the Halos through the eighth and ninth frames to pick up a save.

Boston scored all three of its runs in the top of the second thanks to two Ryan walks plus singles by Fisk, Butch Hobson and Rick Miller.

Post 112 forces Legion finale

Ontario scored a 7-5 victory over Montclair Saturday night to even the best-two-out-of-three District 25 American Legion Playoff Series at John Galvin Park in Ontario.

Montclair edged Ontario, 2-1, Friday night to push the latter's backs against the wall in the do-or-die situation.

The series finale is scheduled for tonight at 6 p.m., also at John Galvin Park. The winner will represent District 25 in the Area V Tournament at Galvin Park beginning Thursday.

Brad Kramer cut

Namath, Haden sharp in drills

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — Quarterbacks Joe Namath and Pat Haden threw a touchdown pass apiece in a goal-line scrimmage during Saturday afternoon's Los Angeles Rams' workout at Cal State Fullerton.

Rookie tight end Don Petersen from Boston College, the Rams' 10th round draft choice, was on the receiving end of both scoring throws.

During the goal-line scrimmage, the offense scored seven times in 13 tries. The ball was placed at the 2-yard line for each play.

Five veterans missed the scrimmage because of slight injuries; running back Lawrence McCutcheon has a hamstring pull, running back Jim Bertelsen, defensive back Bill Simpson and offensive tackle Doug France have knee ailments and defensive end Fred Dryer has a pulled calf muscle.

None of the five are expected to miss the Rams' National Football League pre-season opener against the Minnesota Vikings at the Los Angeles Coliseum next Saturday night.

The Rams, who worked out twice Saturday, were given today off by Coach Chuck Knox. It will be the first day off for the team since camp opened July 18.

A team spokesman announced that rookie free agent place-kicker Brad Kramer, who attended Chaffey High and Azusa-Pacific College, has been released by the Rams, leaving 83 players in camp.

Still missing are five veterans — center Rich Saul, offensive guard Tom Mack, wide receiver Harold Jackson, tight end Charles Young and linebacker Jack Reynolds. No progress was reported Saturday in negotiations with the five.

Late goal gives Earthquakes win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Paul Child scored four minutes into a sudden death overtime Saturday afternoon to give the San Jose Earthquakes a 3-2 North American Soccer League victory over the Los Angeles Aztecs before 5,997 at the L.A. Coliseum.

San Jose evened its season record at 12-12 with the victory. Los Angeles dropped to 14-10.

The Earthquakes took a 1-0 lead at 27:23 when Los Angeles defender Ron Davies unintentionally kicked the ball into the upper corner of the Aztecs' goal.

Los Angeles tied the game at 53:25 on a goal by Steve David, the NASL's leading scorer. George Best was credited with an assist.

The Earthquakes made it 2-1 at 58:26 when Leroy De Leon scored with an assist from Ilija Mitic. Best tied the game again shortly later with assists from Davies and David.

David's goal and assist gives him 58 points for the season. Best's assist was his 17th, one short of the NASL record of 18 set by Pele in 1976.

Post 30 faces W.C. in finals

Jeff Jones scored from third on a wild pitch to give West Covina Post 790 a 8-7, 14-inning conquest of Arcadia Saturday at Claremont-Mudd.

With the win, West Covina advances to the finals of the District 18 American Legion Playoffs against Pomona Post 30 today at noon on the Claremont-Mudd field. The second game, if necessary in the double-elimination tournament, will immediately follow the first contest.

American claims LL crown

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

Pomona American exploded for five runs in the sixth inning to break open a scoreless pitching duel and become the District 20 Little League champs Saturday night at Montvue Park.

With the 5-0 victory over Glendora American, the Pomona squad advances to the Section 6 Tournament, set for this week at the LL Western Regional Headquarters in San Bernardino.

That Sectional tourney starts Tuesday, but Pomona has a bye in the five-team field and won't open action until Friday.

Saturday's contest at Montvue Park was the fastest game of the District tournament as the innings zipped along at a rapid pace until the five-run sixth frame by American.

Mike Razook of Glendora matched Pomona's Pat Trejo's pitching as neither team was able to push a run across the plate in the first five innings.

However, it was a pitcher's worst enemy (a walk) that did in Glendora's Razook. A costly error by his third baseman in that sixth frame also didn't help Razook either.

Pomona American took advantage of the breaks (two walks and the error) and added an RBI single by Brett Handy and a two-run homer off the bat of Gary Liberty to score their five runs.

Pomona had only four hits in the contest and they were held to just two safeties until the sixth by Razook.

Pomona missed several scoring opportunities early in the game as it stranded runners at third in both the second and fourth stanzas. Razook was able to keep Pomona away from the plate as he registered strikeouts with two outs in both innings.

Razook finished with 10 strikeouts before running out of gas in the sixth.

Trejo, despite having runners on base in the second, third and seventh stanzas, was able to blank Glendora on only five hits. He fanned nine batters.

Trejo pitched out of his toughest jam in the sixth when Glendora had runners at second and third with only one out. Trejo struck out Herbie Noe and got Mike Watkins on a fly out to right to end the game.

Mike Drummond led the Glendora squad with two singles in three at-bats. Niel Casey had two hits against Trejo. He had the only extra-base hit (a double) in the contest for Glendora.

American bows in Senior tilt

The Pomona American Senior Division All-Stars bowed out of action for the year Saturday, as San Jose of West Covina bested the locals 5-1 in the finals of the Section 3 Senior Tourney at Diamond Bar.

San Jose, which was unbeaten in the tourney, took advantage of American miscues to score five unearned runs. San Jose will now open play in the Divisional Tourney on Monday in Sepulveda.

Padres' Jones off injured list

NEW YORK (AP) — Cy Young Award winner Randy Jones has been taken off the disabled list by the San Diego Padres and tentatively is set to start next Saturday, the National League club announced.

Jones, who was placed on the 21-day disabled list on June 18, has been recovering from an operation on his left arm to correct a nerve-related injury to the bicep muscle last October.

"I'm definitely going to pitch next Saturday," Jones said following San Diego's 8-6 victory over the New York Mets Saturday. "I feel fine, but I understand I have to keep on exercising. I think the nerve problem is gone."

Jones, whose arm had been in a sling, has a 4-7 record and a 4.61 earned run average this season. The 27-year-old California native, the first San Diego pitcher to win 20 games in a season, had hurt the arm in a game against Cincinnati in the closing week of the 1976 season. However, the arm has been slow in responding to treatment.

McGee, Gilder head for playoff

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jerry McGee and Bob Gilder were clowning around on the tee, laughing and joking, before starting their third round play Saturday in the $200,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic.

"Before either one of us hit a shot," McGee said, "I told Gilder that if we both shot 65 in the next two rounds, maybe we'd be in a playoff on Sunday.

"Of course," McGee added, "I was just kidding. I didn't expect it to happen."

Kidding or not, they're halfway there.

Each shot a six-under-par 65 and moved into a tie for the lead with 18 holes to go in this chase for a $40,000 first prize.

"It's a lot of fun playing in a group like that, where everybody is making birdies," said the 26-year-old Gilder, winner of the Phoenix Open a year ago. "Everybody was loose and easy, relaxed, joking, just having a good time out there. It was a lot of fun."

They finished with matching 54-hole totals of 203, 10 under par on the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course, a tight little 6,687-yard layout that was dampened by overnight rains.

The third member of their group was Bill Rogers, who had a 66 and goes into Sunday's final round just one shot back at 204.

"Jerry and Bob both had real fine first nines and I was just kind of hanging around getting in the way, then I kind of got my little thing going on the back nine," said the chipper Rogers, who played that side in 31. "Man, that's really fun to be in something like that."

In all, the threesome accounted for 19 birdies.

New Zealand's John Lister, who made eagle two when he holed out from the left rough on his second shot of the cool, cloudy day, had a share of the lead until he bogeyed the 17th hole. The lanky Lister hit a spectator with his drive and was short of the green in two. He finished with a 69 and was tied with Gilder one stroke off the pace at 204.

It was two more strokes back to the next man, little Rod Curl, who played his back nine in a spectacular 29 that closed out a 65 and put him at 206.

U. S. Open champ Hubert Green birdied his last hole for a 67 and a tie at 207 with Bob Murphy and Grier Jones, each of whom shot a 69.

Tom Kite, the defending champion and tied with Lister for the 36-hole lead, struggled to a 74 that left him at 209.

Ray Floyd, a two-time winner this season, could do no better than 72 and was a distant eight strokes back at 211.

Monzon wins; to retire

MONTE CARLO (AP) — Carlos Monzon came off the floor Saturday night after a second-round knockdown by Rodrigo Valdes to win a unanimous decision and retain the world middleweight championship he won seven years ago. Monzon immediately announced he was retiring from ring.

The 34-year-old Argentine, who last lost in 1964, held on through eight difficult rounds before opening a deep cut over Valdes' left eye and turning the course of the fight in his favor.

"I think I showed everyone I'm one of the great ones," said Monzon afterward. "But it's over now. For sure. I'm going to start living like a human being tonight."

Rives keys Bear win, 20-6

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Coach Jack Pardee thought a 38-yard pass interception return by Don Rives provided his Chicago Bears with the springboard for their 20-6 opening National Football League exhibition victory Saturday over the New York Jets.

"It gave us momentum," Pardee said of Rives' defensive gem that put the Bears into a 10-6 lead in the third quarter.

"That put us in control the rest of the way," said Pardee after the Bears had mastered the Jets in the season's first exhibition, the annual Pro Football Hall of Fame contest.

Rives, fellow linebacker Waymond Bryant and tackle Jerry Meyers all contributed vital defensive plays that fired the Bears' second-half comeback.

The veteran Chicagoans, expected to challenge the Minnesota Vikings for the National Football Conference Central Division championship, relied on their experience to decide the outcome.

"They did some thiings a veteran team can do," said Walt Michaels, a loser in his debut as the New York coach.

"You don't expect to see those blitzes until the regular season. With veterans, they can do that."

Rives, a fourth-year linebacker from Texas Tech, intercepted a Steve Joachim pass and lumbered 38 yards for a touchdown.

Bryant, another fourth-year linebacker from Tennessee State, recovered a fumble that led to one of two field goals by Bob Thomas, a 49-yarder with 49 seconds left in the third quarter.

On the next play, Meyers, a second-year tackle from Northern Illinois, recovered a fumble by Clark Gaines at the Jets' 38, firing the Bears on another touchdown drive.

Tee to Cup

Here's your chance for Tour fame

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

All those guys in the Pomona Valley who have been just itching to try the Pro Tour get their chance early in October. It's not much of a chance, to be sure, but it's a shot at a qualifying spot in the regionals, then on to the final rounds.

The PGA will hold 25 qualifying tournaments in various parts of the country this fall.

The Southland 36-hole tourney will be held Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 3-4 at Saticoy C.C. in Saticoy. Host pro is Tony Lazane. Contestants can practice on Thursday, Sept. 29.

The number of successful qualifiers will be determined by a percentage of the total field. Qualifiers will advance to regional qualifying; in the West it's at Torrey Pines, Oct. 18-21. Each regional is a 72-hole event with the 36 low scorers advancing to the PGA School proper at Pinehurst C.C., N.C. Nov. 9-12. The number of Tour cards awarded there will be determined by commissioner Deane Beman.

Applications are available at PGA Tour Headquarters, 5101 River Road, Washington, D.C. 20016. Entry fee for the sectionals is $100, for the regionals, $200.

What the heck . . . it may be worth a shot.

Hines likes Bluefield

By TOM RIESENBERG
The Charleston Gazette

Ben Hines is not your average psychologist. Instead of smoking a pipe, he chews tobacco. His daily wages are less than what a normal therapist makes in an hour. And instead of growing up in Austria or New York, he hails from Yeager, Okla.

But psychology is what is needed, Hines says, in his job as manager of West Virginia's Bluefield Orioles, a team in the Appalachian Rookie League and the first step toward "the bigs," namely baseball's major leagues.

"It's not easy to keep up the confidence that these kids come here with," says Hines, who coaches baseball at LaVerne College in California when he's not spending his summer months nursemaiding 25 young and eager but easily discouraged athletes.

"They realize they're no longer the best. It's tough on a lot of them. They miss their girls. They're homesick. Lonely. Afraid."

Ron Whitfield, for instance, is a soft-spoken 20-year-old from Charleroi, Pa. His father began playing ball with him when he was 18 months old. "He's a natural athlete," he says. "But his family was so poor that he had to start working when he was 14."

It's for "the two of us"—father and son—that the younger Whitfield wants to be a big-leaguer. "And I'll make it. Of course I'll make it. I want it that bad."

But despite Whitfield's optimism, his actual chances of making the big time are, like the old joke, slim and none. Clyde Kluttz, the director of the Baltimore Orioles' farm system, Bluefield's parent club, says grimly: "You'll be lucky if one player off a rookie league club makes it to the majors."

Nevertheless, they keep at it, night after night, 70 games a summer, in places like Bluefield, Pulaski, Va., and Johnson City, Tenn. They earn maybe $500 a month, live in private homes and local motels and spend most of their time on road trips (all by bus) playing cards ... and dreaming.

Like Dave Huppert, a 20-year-old native of Buena Park, Calif. With the season—which lasts slightly over two months— about halfway through, he's hitting only .170, although he batted .450 last year at a California junior college.

"Playing in the big leagues has been a lifetime dream," he says. If he doesn't make it, a career as a real estate salesman or college physical education teacher might have to suffice.

Bluefield baseball is a throwback to another, simpler era. Kluttz, involved in pro ball for 40 years, says he hasn't seen much change in the Bluefields of minor league ball since he began his career.

"Oh, there are more teams, so the talent is spread thinner. But that's about it."

Frankie "Poncho" Martin has been playing golf since he was 4-years-old mostly at Los Serranos in Chino. Now 17, after an absence of several years when he played only occasionally, Poncho is definitely back.

Regarded as a top-flight amateur, Poncho these days is practicing regularly with the hopes of eventually turning pro.

Poncho's father, Don Martin, first gave him a golf club when the boy was 4, and Poncho started in winning junior tournaments. Sources in Chino say he was inevitably a top finisher — up until about the age of 12, that is.

Then for a number of reasons, Poncho dropped off the area golf circuit. But all's well now. The young player is at his specialty again, sharpening his game for future competition. We say "Good luck, Poncho, and have a good time."

I had my first opportunity this week to visit Golf Exchange, a shop in Los Angeles where hundreds of clubs are sold and exchanged each day.

Gary Garner, a young teaching pro, took the time and trouble to show us around the shop. The place is jammed with clubs of all sizes, shapes, models, years. You name it, Golf Exchange probably has it.

The unique feature of the shop is that old clubs can be exchanged for newer ones. Thus a player might bring in two or three old woods and walk out with a new one, depending of course on the exchange value of his clubs.

The shop is located at 830 S. Olive St., Los Angeles, if you're interested.

Garner, incidentally, plays out of Los Serranos. Nice meeting up with you, Gary.

Al Siskowski, professional out at San Dimas Canyon, reports that the greens and the tees are in much better shape than they were a few weeks back. Al says fairways are still suffering from the lack of water at the valley course, but that officials are working on ways to bring in the 500 gallons each day that the course needs. I hope to play the course in the near future and post a full report about late developments at San Dimas Canyon.

In an effort to get the building fund moving, San Antonio Hospital in Upland will hold its first golf tournament ever. All proceeds will go to the Building Fund.

The shotgun-starting event is scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 5 at El Prado; tee-off time is 11 a.m.

Directors for the tourney are Dr. Harold Yanamura, medical staff president; Gene Alair, Foundation Board chairman; and Jack Berens, Employe Capital Campaign chairman.

A no-host cocktail hour is planned after golf from 4:30 until 6 p.m. when a prime rib dinner will be held.

The entry tab is $35, and the dinner alone is $10. Tournament officials will award prizes for longest drive, closest to the pin, high and low gross, and net winners.

The tournament is open to both men and women.

Other members of the tournament committee are Dr. A.J. Alderfer, Bea Anderson, Jim Anderson, Dr. Robert Crawford, Marie Dawson, Earl Dupper, Ed Ewing, Chuck Musser, Mary Riley, and Hans Wiik.

Junior golfers from the Southland will get a chance to test Marshall Canyon on Tuesday, Aug. 9 when the Los Angeles County-sponsored tournament is held.

Many of the finest golfers under 18 years of age will be on hand. Last year, 2-under-par 69 won low gross honors so you can see how tough many of these young players are.

Entry blanks are available at Marshall Canyon and at other Los Angeles County courses.

Ken Venturi, the former U.S. Open winner, talked about Lee Trevino's six-stroke lead last Sunday, and warned that Lee should not be too careful in the Canadian Open.

Venturi said when you're playing for pars, you get bogies; when you play for birdies, you often get pars.

I am now playing for bogies, hoping to settle for a double bogie.

Golfers around Pomona are quickly growing to like Mountain Meadows as a championship course. The fairways are coming in beautifully green, and the tees and greens are excellent. Dave Cink, Meadows pro, is wearing a big smile these days.

Money Matters: Now that Ray Floyd and Julius Boros have become Nos. 14 and 15 to join the million-dollar career winners, the next in line are Frank Beard with $980,026 and Dave Stockton, $957,516...It appears winnings of about $50,000 will be required to make the top 60 money-winners this year, the list that insures a player of a year's exemption from qualifying...At the moment, the list appears in for a major shake-up. Twenty players now occupy positions in the top 60 who didn't make it last year...The current format calls for 20 percent of a tournament purse to go to the winner. A proposal is now being studied that would lower the winner's percentage and increase the money for players finishing lower in the tournament standings.

The game of golf, says Tom Kite, is very, very healthy.

"We're setting attendance records almost every week, so we must be doing something right," he said. "Other sports, well, they're not dying, but they aren't growing, expanding, either.

"Golf is. More people are coming out to see us each week, purses are going up, more tournaments are wanting to get on the schedule."

A large portion of that healthy growth, said Kite, is due to increased and increasing competition on the tour.

"No one man is dominating," he said. "At one time, if a sponsor had Arnold (Palmer) in his field, he was in good shape If he didn't have Arnold, he was hurting.

OMS attracts Ongais

When Hawaiian-born Danny Ongais won the United States Auto Club's 200-mile championship car race at Michigan International Speedway a few weeks ago, he broke a three-year monopoly hald by eight other drivers. Not since 1973 had any driver other than a member of the so-called Golden Eight — A.J. Foyt, Gordon Johncock, Wally Dallenbach, Johnny Rutherford, Al and Bobby Unser, Tom Sneva and Mike Mosley — cracked the winner's circle at a USAC championship race.

Ongais (pronounced On-guy-iss) became the new kid on the block with his convincing Michigan win, and he plans to further establish that image on September 4 when he goes against the Golden Eight and other top-ranked veterans in the 8th annual California 500 at Ontario Motor Speedway.

A former drag racing champion and one of the top performers on the Formula 5000 circuit, Ongais entered the California 500 this week with Ted Field's Interscope Racing Team Parnelli, the same Cosworth-powered machine that carried him to his Michigan victory, and the car in which the 35-year-old speedster set a one-lap race record of over 190 mph during the Indianapolis 500 last May.

Ongais linked up with Fields and the Interscope team just prior to the 1976 California 500 which was Danny's first championship race start after qualifying well up in the 33-car pack. He was running with the leaders when a mechanical failure caused him to lose control coming out of the fourth turn.

The car hit the outside retaining wall, spun into the infield and flipped over, landing upside down with Ongais pinned inside. When the machine was righted, Ongais scampered out unhurt, except for bruises and a sprained ankle.

Now, in his first full year on the circuit, he has pulled off a major victory and established himself as a strong candidate to increase the Golden Eight club to nine.

The $343,000 California 500 is the third and final leg of auto racing's 1977 Triple Crown series which also includes the Indianapolis and Pocono 500-milers.

'I like to find people'

Locator of heirs 'loves' his job

WILLOUGHBY, Ohio (AP) — When Lawrence E. Morrow tells people he has located money that they didn't know was theirs, reactions range from exultation to suspicion that he's a con man.

"But I love this work," Morrow says, shrugging off the innuendos of chicanery that attend his job. "Sure, hopefully I like to make a good buck. But I also like to find people. I like the investigation and the responses. And I make better money than working in a factory."

Morrow is a "finger," or heir locator. From scouring of state records or from contacts with lawyers, he identifies persons who have unclaimed assets in estates or funds or insurance policies. These assets are held by banks or insurance companies but must be claimed through the state commerce department. The department earlier this year issued the names of about 240,000 persons who, unknown to them, own $18.5 million in assets and accrued interest.

Despite public advertisements, most people never learn about their possible riches. I. Charles Rhoads, deputy director of the commerce department, said that during the last half of 1976 the department paid back about $300,000.

Morrow, who runs Fingers Diversified Inc. here, tries to find persons who are owed $1,000 or more. Morrow says he informs the prospective claimant how much money he can expect to recover and proposes a contract calling for a fee of 40 per cent to 50 per cent of the money recovered.

Some of Morrow's assignments are serendipitous, "I was in the library in Cincinnati once looking at city directories. I met a multimillionaire who was trying to locate heirs to some property in Kentucky which he wanted to buy because he wanted the coal rights to it.

"Well, I got this job which involved tracing heirs to property rights which were deeded in 1877. My investigation took me to southern Ohio, to northern Ohio, to Canada and to Chicago. There I found a relative of the man I was looking for. She was 92 years old and living in a nursing home. She remembered that part of the family had moved to El Paso. I called the library in El Paso and there I found some wills. The case is now in court."

Morrow, 32, adds that he spends most of his time on research and travel.

"I started doing this work two years ago. At that time I had a restaurant and I read an article about a finder in New York. The line of work intrigued me," he recalls.

So Morrow sold his restaurant and set up shop. There's no certification of training for the work, and Morrow says he had to learn everything as he went along. In 1975 when he started, he says he had to tend bar at night in order to make ends meet. Last year, he continues, his business began to pay off; and in two years he says he has returned half a million dollars.

Rhoads says he has had no indications of problems with Finders Diversified, but he advises people who are contacted by a finders group to seek references on the organization and to make sure they know how much money is involved in the contract.

ADDED HAZARD — The eighth green at Milwaukee's Oakhills Golf Course became a little crowded when this flock of geese took up residence. They seemed to enjoy the greenery.

Team is undoing damage by man

BATAVIA, Ill. (AP) — Conservationists are trying to undo what their ancestors did to a plot of prairie land at Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory.

They have finished their annual seeding, not with corn and soybeans, but with the wild grasses and flowers which thrived before they were uprooted by the plow.

Dr. Robert F. Betz, professor of biology at Northeastern Illinois University, Chicago, said in an interview that when the project was completed in about 10 years the site would be scientifically valuable for the study of ecosystems and the evolution of prairie land.

Intensive cultivation starting in the 19th century destroyed all but a tiny fraction of the prairie — less than .002 per cent — in the eastern Middle West, Betz said.

Fermilab turned over 660 acres for the restoration project, begun in 1974. Before Fermilab was built, the area was used for farming.

Recently, Betz and his colleagues planted 450 pounds of seeds from about 30 varieties of prairie grass and 24 wildflowers on another 40 or 50 acres of the plot. That brings the total seeded so far to 60 or 70.

The principal varieties planted were purple and yellow cone flower, prairie dock, purple prairie clover, compass plant, and Indian, big and little bluestem and switch grass.

The original seeds, Betz said, came from prairies maintained by Morton Arboretum at Lisle and his university's Markham plot, as well as an old cemetery and from along railroad tracks.

Now, with the help of about 200 volunteers from the laboratory and the nearby community, seeds are harvested in the autumn from the restoration plot, as well as elsewhere, for reseeding the following spring.

They are cleaned, sorted, bagged, dampened and stored under refrigeration until time for spring planting.

Betz said plans were to harvest the seeds mechanically in about a year. This would mean about 1,000 pounds could be gathered, so that more acreage could be planted in future years.

Thorough discing and plowing are done to try to eliminate weeds from areas to be seeded, Betz said, and a controlled burnoff is done on previously seeded areas in the springtime for the same purpose.

Otherwise, the weeds crowd out the seedlings.

Once the restored prairie is well along, Betz said, the conservationists plan to bring in Franklin ground squirrels, prairie cicadas, bumble bees, robber flies and other animals and insects which once inhabited the virgin land, but some of which are now endangered.

Russian's art work restored

EDITOR'S NOTE: For decades, Russians have been so busy building, that they had little patience for re-building. But something seems to have changed Russian attitudes a bit, as the government has now launched a program to uncover and restore the country's treasure of priceless religious icons.

MOSCOW (AP) — Restorers are hard at work trying to save some of Russia's greatest art works — religious icons hidden under layers of paint on the walls of churches, museums and even the Kremlin.

Some of the icons haven't been seen in centuries and were discovered by specialists using infrared light and X rays. Some are hidden under icons painted by later artists.

The restoration has become a major project as the Soviet government begins to treat Russia's pre-revolution history with greater respect.

A new and much-publicized law protects historical monuments, including churches, and Soviets are becoming aware of the attraction icons and old churches hold for foreigners.

Specialists in restoration have discovered the priceless ancient works of art — elaborate depictions of Christian themes in the stylized forms of old Russia — using the infrared light and X rays.

As the icons of the early masters faded or went out of style over the centuries, later artists painted over them. Today restorers are working to save the older icons, considered more valuable than the newer works.

But there are cases where both the older and newer icons are priceless, so the restorers await technological developments that will allow them to save both.

The older masterpiece waits, therefore, hidden under the a coat of paint that may have been applied 200 to 300 years ago.

Technology for saving both icons is advancing, however, and some experiments are under way on how to save both layers.

Sergei V. Filatov, 28, is a restorer who has worked on methods for sliding off an entire icon onto a new board.

Since the 1950s, restorers have been able to slip off the paint of newer icon only in separate patches, a method that irreparably damages it, he said in an interview.

But the development of new glues and chemicals have opened the possibility of removing an entire icon in one piece.

Examples of his successes hang in his workshop, a freshly restored church in the center of Moscow where artisans refurbish icons, religious statues and wooden frescoes from churches around the country.

Filatov said he has tried the technique only on less valuable icons. The priceless ones must await perfection of the method, he said.

As chemists work on new glues and compounds, Filatov works painstakingly on some of the thousands of icons awaiting restoration.

Spending sometimes as much as three years on a single icon, Filatov first spreads it with an organic compound covered with a compress. When the painting has become soft, he slowly starts to lift the top layer away with a scalpel.

When the newer icon has been slipped onto a board, both layers may need a thorough cleaning and brightening to bring out faded colors.

Filatov and his coworkers make periodic trips around the country, collecting forgotten icons and statues left undiscovered in private homes or in small churches.

Hundreds of these are now accumulating in museum basements awaiting restoration.

ART WORK — A Soviet artisan uses a microscope in Moscow to restore an ancient Russian religious icon. Some of the great Russian religious art works lie hidden under coats of paint added by later painters.

Northern islands a place of no return

CAPE NOSAPPU, Japan (AP) — Two miles off this northeastern tip of Hokkaido are the "northern islands," once the home of about 17,000 Japanese. They have been a place of no return for the past 32 years and may remain so for many years to come.

The Soviet Union seized the islands — Kunashir, Iturup (Etorofu), Shikotan and the Habomai group — in the closing days of World War II when Russian forces entered the conflict against Japan. The Japanese government, former residents of the islands, opposition political parties (including the Communists) have demanded their return - out in vain.

"The United States has returned to Japan the Okinawa islands they occupied in the war, and the Americans fought against Japan for four years," one villager here said. "The Russians fought against us for only one week. Why can't they return our lands?"

Japan makes a distinction between the four island groups and 18 others of the Kuril chain in the northern waters. It claims Japanese people have inhabited the four islands since the 17th century, and that they are legitimate Japanese territory now occupied by the Russians in violation of international law.

The Soviet Union has refused to discuss their return. A result has been failure to sign a bilateral peace treaty and tension over fishing in the area.

The Japanese government says there were 16,745 Japanese, mostly fishermen, on the islands in August 1945, when the Russians invaded. Virtually all were quickly expelled. Many of them still live near Cape Nosappu here on Japan's northernmost island.

"During the 32 years that followed, 2,835 former islanders died and the whereabouts of 1,012 are unknown. But most of the rest of islanders still want to go back to their ancestral home again," said Osamu Moriya, director of the semi-official Northern Territory Association.

The ancestral tombs of about 4,000 are on the islands, he added. The Russians used to permit an annual pilgrimage without visas for about 45 family members, but stopped this in last year.

"They tried to show us the lands are theirs. It was a great shock," said Mitsuo Sunami, chairman of the Council to Promote Return of the Northern Territory in the nearby city of Nemuro. "But we feel our postwar era will never end until the return (of the islands)."

The Soviet demand for visas apparently came as a reaction to a Soviet air force lieutenant's defection with a MIG25 jet fighter last July, sources said. The pilot landed in Japan but later went to the United States. His aircraft was returned to the Soviet Union but only after it was minutely examined by U.S. and Japanese experts.

Writer, actor, father

Robert Shaw juggles 'roles'

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Shaw, actor, writer and father, says he's torn between the three "professions."

"Maybe I'd be a better writer if not an actor, or a better actor if not a writer," he muses. But Shaw clearly relishes his role as father to a "regiment" of ten children and asserts that he spends more time with his family than most fathers.

The 49-year-old Englishman is best known as the fellow devoured by the shark in the movie "Jaws," as the subway hijacker burned to a crisp in "The Taking of Pelham One Two Three," as "Black Sunday's" driven Israeli agent and, most recently, as a crusty deep sea expert in "The Deep."

This Robert Shaw, the actor, is also Robert Shaw, the author, who in 1962 won Britain's esteemed Hawthenden Prize for "the best work of imaginative literature," a distinction he shares with Evelyn Waugh and Graham Greene.

"It's the only prize I've ever won that I've paid any regard to," says Shaw, who pauses a moment and adds "... except for athletic cups.

"It was an awful moment when I chose to be an actor," he reflects. "I realized I couldn't play rugby football because we'd always have a matinee."

Shaw, who houses his brood in a 22-room estate in County Mayo, Ireland, and brings his family to his film location when he can't make it home for vacations, says that writing and acting don't occupy separate drawers for him.

Besides his box-office appeal as an actor, Shaw has found that many directors with floundering scripts gravitate to him as well:

"I think half the reason they hire me is to help in the rewriting of the script."

Shaw says the directors have asked him to fix scenes, and he reworks them as requested. "But I never want to do it. That's not really writing, it's fixing. I don't get paid for the rewrite work and I often have to walk a political tightrope with the rest of the cast and the producer."

When he writes his own part, it's easier for him to get into the role but there's one problem — "I can't remember the lines because I've rewritten them so many times."

His writing helps him as an actor because "it gives you a certain objectivity. You can see the other side of the question."

Savoring a piece of English toffee, Shaw sinks into his armchair, plunks his feet on the coffee table and makes a joke of his script "patchwork."

"If you think the pictures I've done are bad, you should have seen them before I rewrote them."

Shaw flips this two-sided coin over and explains that acting helps him as a writer too.

"The dialogue in my novels is better than pretty well any other novelist," he asserts. "Most novelists cannot write dialogue. My books sound best when they're read aloud."

Shaw has written five novels and is at work on a sixth, to be called "The Ice Floe." The subject is Manhattan and old people and Shaw says it's "part myth and part autobiographical."

"Writing, although I don't love it, is more important than acting," says Shaw. "One can make a personal statement as a writer which you can't as an actor. How can you compare Robert Redford and Shakespeare?"

Ever since "Jaws," Shaw has been receiving 50 to 100 letters a week from admiring women, many of them with offers of marriage.

His second wife, actress Mary Ure, died tragically in 1975. Shortly afterwards, there were loads of letters from divorced women in the Midwest and Scottish women wishing to look after his children. But Shaw eventually married his longtime secretary, Virginia Jansen.

Celestial bodies play a role

Chinese history offers 'earthquakes' pattern

TOKYO (AP) — After digging into China's rich and extensive history, a Chinese scholar has suggested, "There may be a definite relationship between the movement of certain celestial bodies and the triggering of earthquakes."

Writing in the magazine, "Historical Research," Yen Tun-Chieh also raises the possibility of detecting impending temblors through observation of unusual rain, wind and dust storm conditions.

A copy of the article, written several months after last year's disastrous earthquake in the Tangshan area of China, was seen here in translation recently.

The strange behavior of animals and the level of water in wells also are referred to as likely prequake warnings.

Study of the frequency of Chinese earthquakes, gleaned from historical records covering the years between 504 A.D. and 1973, indicate that a high activity of earthquake shocks may appear in the Shansi, Shensi and Hopei provinces around the year 2044, Yen said.

"Some people have lined up all major earthquakes of force 6 and above in the North China seismic zone since 1888 for analysis and found that there was a cycle of 11 years and another of 28 years," he said. "The cycle of about 11 years approximates that of a revolution of Jupiter or that of the appearance of sunspots, while the cycle of about 28 years approximates that of a revolution of Saturn." The subject, he added, deserves "further exploration and study."

The Chinese, Yen continued, have summed up a wealth of experience on premonitions of impending quakes. Some occurred when the weather became fine after rain; big earthquakes in 1622, 1668 and 1819 all followed prolonged periods of rain.

Others were preceded by markedly abnormal temperature, unusual gusts of wind and dust storms.

"A few days before the big quake of Kansu that occurred on Dec. 26, 1920, the horizon on all sides yellowed and looked like flames. The sky was clear and the air dry, and people felt parched without knowing why."

There were many records of yellow dust prior to an earthquake, Yen said, "making it impossible to tell whether it was morning or evening."

Yen said that, on the basis of more than 10,000 statistical references gathered from histories, local records and other sources, a total of 8,112 earthquakes had been recorded by 1949. Of these, 1,229 were strong quakes of 4.75 or more on the Richter scale. From the early 14th to the end of the 19th century there were eight quakes larger than 8 on the scale and six from the beginning of the 20th century to 1949, he said.

The article dismisses as ridiculous superstitious that an earthquake precedes the fall of a ruler, or that supernatural forces are involved.

The first earthquake to be recorded was in the millenium before Christ, during the reign of the emperor Shun, Yen wrote.

The description is vivid: "The seedlings of three cereals were dying. The sky rained blood. There was ice in summer. The earth cracked till water gushed. The green dragon rose from the temple. The sun came out in the night but not the day."

Seven treaties

The border between the United States and Canada is the result of no less than seven treaties. Negotiators who signed the Treaty of Paris in 1782 relied upon a map drawn 26 years earlier in defining the border. The map's inaccuracies raised boundary questions that were not resolved until the Treaty of 1925.

How acid is rainwater?

NORTHBROOK, Ill. (AP) — Is rainwater slightly acid, very acid, alkaline, or neutral?

This and 299 other questions are being asked dealers in water conditioning equipment as part of a consumer-protection program being conducted by the Water Quality Association. Those who pass the test will be permitted to call themselves "Certified Dealer."

As for rainwater, it's slightly acid.

Scientists weigh need against risk

Liquefied natural gas (LNG)—is the 'peril' worth it?

EDITOR'S NOTE: Cleveland, 1944. A tank full of liquefied natural gas cracked and 128 people died in a gas-fed blaze. LNG, as its called, is gas cooled to the point where it is condensed to a tiny fraction of its normal volume. Easily stored. As plans for LNG tanks progress, scientists weigh their need against possible peril.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

EVERETT, Mass. (AP) — The odds against it are towering, but in a nightmare assuming the worst possible contingencies, the script would go like this:

A plane takes off from Logan International Airport. Seconds later, the engines fail. Two miles away, it crashes into a tall white tank filled with 25 million gallons of super-cold liquefied natural gas.

Flame soar 1,000 feet into the sky. In the streets of the nearest neighborhood a half mile away, the blast of heat blisters people's skin.

Houses catch fire, but the flames are so intense that fire trucks can't come near. Ambulances turn back before they reach the scorched victims. The fire burns until all of the gas is gone.

The only liquefied natural gas terminal in use in the United States is at the end of Boston Harbor. It has been there since November 1971. Both supporters and detractors of the fuel depot agree that the likelihood of a tragedy is remote. But they wonder if it is worth the risk.

"The probability of a plane hitting the tank has been calculated," says John G.L. Cabot, chairman of Distrigas Corp., owner of the terminal.

"The range of risk to the public in the vicinity of Everett is about like being struck by lightning or hit by a meteorite. It's there. It's not zero, because no danger is absolutely zero."

Natural gas is a common fuel. It supplies nearly a third of the nation's energy. But it also is growing scarce. Last winter, schools and factories closed because there was not enough.

Elsewhere in the fuel-producing world, natural gas often is a nuisance. Rarely can those near the oil fields use it, and loading the vapor onto a ship is unprofitable. So much of it is burned off as waste.

Now plants are being built, primarily in Algeria, that can liquefy natural gas. The gas is cooled to 259 degrees below zero, where it turns into a fluid that is one six-hundredths of its normal volume.

Condensed this way, liquefied natural gas, or LNG, is economical enough to load onto tankers and carry across the world. The first shipment was made in 1961, and now Japan imports 80 per cent of its gas in liquid form.

In the United States, only the Boston Harbor terminal, small by world standards, gets regular shipments.

But LNG terminals are being built in Cove Point, Md., and Savannah, Ga. The Federal Power Commission has approved construction of one in Lake Charles, La., and others have been proposed in Los Angeles and Corpus Christi, Texas. There's another one on New York's Staten Island, but it's not in use because it lacks federal approval.

At Boston Harbor, LNG arrives at an average rate of about 40 million cubic feet a day. Chase Manhattan Bank of New York estimates that by 1985 the nation will be importing 6.2 billion cubic feet a day.

In 1941, a plant was built in Cleveland that liquefied pipeline gas so it could be stored. Three years later, the tank cracked.

The cold liquid flowed into the streets. As it warmed, it boiled, wafting clouds of gas vapor. Soon the vapors caught fire. When the huge blaze was over, 128 people had died.

Both sides admit that the design of LNG facilities has changed substantially in the 33 years since.

MONITORED VISIT — The tanker Descartes, with its load of liquefied natural gas, is escorted by tugs into Boston Harbor, where all other traffic has been stopped by the Coast Guard. The gas will be unloaded at the Everett Terminal, whose two white storage tanks are visible at upper right. The tanker has already been inspected before entering the harbor, and will be strictly monitored during the unloading.

"The safety is built into the tanks and plant," said George Auchy, manager of the Boston Harbor terminal. "Before we started, we recognized all our possible faults and all of the things that could go wrong — all the disasters that can happen — and designed around them."

The safety features are part of the daily routine, but terminal workers are most aware of them about once a month. That is when the new cargo comes in.

The approaching gas-filled tanker idles outside the harbor while Coast Guard inspectors board and spend an hour or two going over the ship. They pay special attention to sensors that are supposed to detect leaks of the clear, odorless gas.

When they are satisfied, a Coast Guard boat slowly leads the ship into harbor. Two miles ahead and one mile behind, all traffic is stopped.

Finally, the ship ties up in Everett at the Distrigas terminal on the Mystic River, an arm of Boston Harbor. While it is there, a Coast Guard craft stands by, making sure other ships keep their distance.

Usually the tanker is the Descartes, a French ship that carries 50,000 cubic meters of LNG, enough gas to supply the needs of a city of 30,000 for a year.

Pipes are attached to the ship and cooled. Then the gas is pumped into the two big tanks on land.

While this is happening, sensors check the pipe for leaks. Closed circuit television cameras scan the plant, and police block access roads.

All of this fails to satisfy James Fay, an engineering professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. As a member of the Union of Concerned Scientists, he was an early critic of transporting LNG.

"Despite what the numbers say about the low probability of a major accident, the consequences are so potentially harmful that it's foolish to balance people's lives against the reliability of the engineers and scientists doing the risk analysis," he says.

If the accident happened in Everett, he says, hundreds would die. "The scale of the fire would be larger and more intense than anything anyone has ever experienced."

Fay isn't opposed to LNG terminals. He's opposed to LNG terminals in the middle of cities.

"We aren't forced to make the agonizing choice of gambling people's lives against the benefit of having more gas, because good sites are available," he says.

Thousands of layoffs threatened

Rockwell rocked by Carter's decision to scrap B1 project

LOS ANGELES (LENS) — President Carter's decision to stop the B1 bomber looks like a blow to the prime contractor, Rockwell International. It has lost a multibillion-dollar contract, and been forced to lay off thousands of workers. But, in cold economic reality, the cancellation may be a big relief.

The B1 was a big project, even by the standards of aerospace and defense: about $500 million last year for Rockwell and 16,000 jobs for its work force. But Rockwell International Corp., born of the merger in 1967 of North American Aviation and the Rockwell-Standard Corporation, is a giant conglomerate quite able to sustain the loss of a headline-grabbing government contract — thanks to an array of less romantic, but more profitable, lines of business from truck axles to gas meters.

The company reported sales of $5.2 billion in the year ended Sept. 30, 1976, with net earnings of $121 million. It employs about 120,000. Aerospace operations accounted for $1.6 billion — , 31.5 per cent of sales, but only 27.5 per cent of profits. The B1 thus produced a third of Rockwell's aerospace business, and only 10 per cent of total revenues. According to the company, B-1 profits were small, about 5 per cent of total earnings.

More than half of Rockwell's profits — $68 million (57 per cent) — come from the highly profitable manufacture of automotive components, although these sales of $1.2 billion are only 23 per cent of total revenues. Most of this business is in huge axles, gearboxes, and other components for large trucks, buses and road-building equipment. The division also makes passenger car parts.

The firm's electronics operations — $1 billion in sales, $22 million in profits — are more in the "Star Wars" mold. Avionics for the government and commercial markets and telecommunications equipment are the main money spinners. The division also makes guidance and navigation systems for the Minuteman Intercontinental ballistic missile and Trident submarine fleet. Rockwell's unprofitable plunge into the hotly competitive semiconductor and pocket calculator markets knocked $15 million off the division's profits last year.

Rockwell's other lines look more prosaic, if $1.3 billion in revenues can be so described — especially as they produce a loss of more than $3 million last year. The firm makes money on valves and meters used by utilities, and power tools for the do-it-yourself market, but loses more on its printing presses, looms, and domestic appliances.

The President eased Rockwell's withdrawal pangs with research funds — about $500 million this year, $400 million in 1978, but 8,000 of the 16,000 Rockwell employes will be sacked. Another 20,000 jobs will be lost at the 5,000 subcontractors scattered across the nation.

The cancellation deprived Rockwell of an awesome order backlog: 244 aircraft at $103 million each, plus spares and other support, with production lines running well into the next decade — if, that is, the government had kept the money flowing.

The Air Force probably only wanted about 150 B1 aircraft. It asked for the larger number to cut cost-per-plane to a politically acceptable level.

The B1 was already slower than first promised, as well as far more expensive. Had President Carter given his approval, Rockwell could have faced another presidential cutoff halfway through the B1 program, when the chop would have hurt it far more severely.

Meanwhile, the funds not spent on the B1 will stay in the defense budget. Rockwell will be pitching for its share: it already has a vertical take-off and landing (VTOL) fighter it wants to sell to the Navy.

'Bad news' drops market sharply

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market suffered its sharpest drop in more than a year-and-a-half this past week, faced with a barrage of adverse business and economic news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 33.35 to 890.07, for its worst weekly showing since it gave up 41.87 points Dec. 1-5 of 1975.

The selloff hit its peak in a 19.75-point slide on Wednesday that swept the average to an 18-month low.

The damage was equally evident in other market indicators that until recently had been faring considerably better than the Dow.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks lost 1.59 to 54.12, and the American Stock Exchange market value index dropped 2.96 to 120.80.

Big Board volume averaged 22.79 million shares a day, against 27.64 million the week before.

The slide began at the opening on Monday, abruptly stilling the "summer rally" talk that had been so prevalent in the previous week, when the Dow rose 17.47 points.

"The bear jumped out of the woods," said Anthony J. Correra, a market analyst at E.F. Hutton & Co.

"The reality of a slowdown in the economy began to sink in even though it had been discussed for months."

Analysts said the evidence suggested that traders began the week anticipating the series of adverse news developments that was to come by Friday.

First of all, there was added fuel for concern about the business outlook in the government's report that the index of leading economic indicators dropped 0.6 per cent in June.

That marked the second straight decline in the index, which is designed to function as a sort of economic crystal ball. Economists traditionally regard any string of three minus readings in the index as a real cause for concern.

At the same time, fears of rising interest rates were resurfacing. A $5 billion bulge in the basic measure of the money supply stirred new speculation that the Federal Reserve might be beginning a new round of credit tightening.

Chairman Arthur Burns of the Fed told the House Banking Committee on Friday that the money supply was continuing to grow too rapidly to meet the central bank's goals in its efforts to curb inflation.

These developments really didn't qualify as surprises, but a decision Wednesday by Bethlehem Steel to cut its dividend in half did.

"That really shook up a lot of people," said Charles Jensen, technical analyst at Merkin & Co.

Bethlehem Steel shares ranked as one of the week's biggest losers, falling 5⅜ points on Wednesday alone and singlehandedly exerting a strong downward influence on the Dow.

Why is the supply so tight?

One reason is the drive to reinsulate homes to cut energy costs. Since 1974, 9.2 million American homes have been reinsulated—about 12 per cent of all homes.

That percentage is rising, and President Carter's energy proposals, which contain tax incentives to those who reinsulate their homes, could provide even more impetus.

Another reason is a rise in housing starts, from 1.2 million housing starts in 1975 to 1.9 million projected this year.

Norwegian, Japanese

Designers take spotlight

By SUZY PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Per Spook, a young Norwegian whose name is new on the French fashion scene, drew applause from the press today for his haute couture at the Paris fall-winter fashion showings.

Spook worked with Louis Feraud and the Feraud influence was obvious in the Norwegian's combinations of geometric prints, black and white and colors. But Spook did his own thing, and most of it was quite good.

The big coats were striking, with circular midcalf skirts, bold turnover collars, and tightly cinched waists with double belts. Mostly in beige or caramel colors, the coats often had modified puff sleeves narrowing at the wrist.

Some had leather strips detailing borders and sleeves, while others sported huge flap pockets and rows of jet beads up the sleeves.

Daytime outfits featured ideas like geometric print tunics, often jagged-edged, over gathered skirts. The look became a bit gimmicky with a narrow, buttoned suit jacket much shorter than the tunic sticking out below. The gathered skirts were midcalf length and worn with flat Norwegian-looking boots of moccasin shape.

For evening, the Spook girls stepped out in a whole series of black trouser suits, one of the best ones modeled by film star Jane Birkin in a musketeer hat. Other details included spangled narrow spencer jackets, some over see-through chiffon. Some were topped by close-fitting jackets in brightly shaded taffeta.

There were plenty of evening dresses, too, some in bold white rose prints on solid red or blue worn with enormous shawls. Others were dressier, such as a soft blousing dress in champagne-colored chiffon and ribbons. The coats were big luxury fox and lynx numbers, for starlets.

Everything was soft and gentle at Hanae Mori, the Japanese designer who started off in Paris last season. Her coats and capes were enveloping and warm. The suits had a good fitted look, with long, flared skirts topped by easy jackets fastened by little ties or short spencer-type fitted boleros in nubbly tweed.

But the small collection featured evening wear. Mrs. Mori's evening look ranged from a black-and-white taffeta number with a full skirt topped by white blouse and fitted jacket — like a tuxedo turned into a ball gown — to suits with seethrough sequined tops under proper jackets.

Mrs. Mori brought the rising sun into her collection in the Oriental numbers. There were soft prints with bridges; Japanese trees and Mt. Fuai; and lovely bold roses on chiffon topped with a sequined decollete bodice under a quilted satin jacket in pearl gray or ivory. She threw in a couple of ballooning taffeta zouave pants for good measure.

The house of Chanel was true to its fashion, with the usual beautiful fabrics, cut and detail. Suits in soft-weave flecked wools had snugger, shorter jackets for next season, worn over pleated skirts.

A new touch was given by younger-looking voluminous jackets or coats, instead of the usual fitted style. These shorty coats were sometimes topped by a long scarf at the neck or a close cape effect at the shoulders. Cavalier-style boots were shown for the first time in 15 years.

The hats were knit caps banded by matching heavy braid, or perky flat berets.

As with Chanel of yesteryear and Dior of this year, the Gigi look appeared — this version a black dress with short blouson top, a big white collar and bow.

Le tout-Paris of couture went to a cocktail party on a terrace overlooking the Champs Elysees, where prizes were awarded by fashion experts to Lanvin and Serge Lepage.

The house of Lanvin and couturier Jules-Francois Crahay won the "golden thimble" for creativity, and Serge Lepage garnered the runner-up "golden needle," presented by Madame Gres. She is the couturier who heads Paris' powerful fashion business organization, the Chambre Syndicale de la Haute Couture. Runnerup to Lepage was the Norwegian, Spook, in a good showing for a newcomer.

Coping

Men tend to deal with stress by either thinking the problem over or trying to forget about it through sex, drinking or smoking, according to the results of a questionnaire distributed in the San Francisco area. Women use other coping mechanisms, such as eating sweets and consuming soft drinks.

Meaning of habits

Everyone has certain habits and mannerisms. How much do you know about what they mean and what they signal to others? Here's a chance to test your knowledge.

1. Looking at a person's eyes is the best way to tell if he is disgusted.
True () False ()

2. The person who smiles all the time is usually a happy person and the smile always endears him to others.
True () False ()

3. The adult nail-biter is usually nervous, but otherwise well-adjusted.
True () False ()

4. The person who can't pass a mirror without gazing into it and carefully studying himself is only expressing a healthy self-concern.
True () False ()

5. The woman who uses heavy eye makeup usually wants to attract attention.
True () False ()

6. The person who constantly fidgets with his hands, especially if he covers his mouth when he speaks, is apt to be lying.
True () False ()

7. Women are more apt than men to pay attention to gestures and nonverbal signals.
True () False ()

8. The person who's always late may be a rebel.
True () False ()

ANSWERS

1. FALSE. Drs. Jerry Boucher and Paul Ekman found that people were 92 per cent accurate in judging disgust by looking at a person's cheeks and mouth; only 5 per cent accurate when looking at eyes and eyelids, and they were only 13 per cent accurate when judging brow and forehead.

2. FALSE. Studies show that this isn't necessarily so. The person who smiles all the time is usually not happy, but nervous and insecure. A perpetual smile gives others the impression of a "suppressed negative attitude."

3. FALSE. A study of 1,000 adult nail-biters at the University of California showed that compulsive nail-chewers were usually filled with pent-up resentment and hostility resulting from acute inner tensions and frustrations. While nail-biting in itself isn't always a sign of emotional disturbance, most nail-biters are lacking in emotional stability and are not well-adjusted to their environment.

4. FALSE. Lengthy or frequent mirror-gazing indicates overconcern, insecurity and a general lack of self-confidence. Adults who can't pass a mirror without stopping, posing or fussing probably feel a lack of love and have a low self-esteem.

5. FALSE. Psychologist Richard Coss of the University of California at Davis suggests that heavy mascara may be worn to ward off the stares of others. He notes that animals use their eyes to frighten potential enemies and that women may us heavy eye makeup for much the same purpose.

6. TRUE. Professors Mark Knapp and Roderick Hart of the Department of Communication at Purdue in an experiment in duplicity, observed that a strong signal of lying was fidgeting, fiddling with glasses, touching the face and placing the hand near, or over the mouth, as if to say, "I wish I didn't have to say this," or "I wish I hadn't said that."

7. TRUE. Studies indicate that women are much more attentive to and affected by gestures and other nonverbal signals than men are. Women, therefore, are more apt to give more importance to gestures than to what is being said. Men are less likely to search for hidden meanings.

8. TRUE. The person who is habitually late may be rebelling against his parents and, by extension, against all authority, especially that of the dictatorship of the clock.

Decrease

A national survey indicates that the proportion of physicians, dentists and pharmacists who smoke cigarettes has decreased markedly.

Progress Bulletin

Eight Ontario youths to create art object

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

Creative arts have opened up a world of cultural education and employment for eight Ontario youngsters.

Yvonne Rangel, Patricia Copas, Raul Esquivel, Anita Mijares, Paul Caudillo, Donna Gilbertson, Rebecca Hall and Phillip Delgado have been selected to participate in an art project at Bon View Community Center.

The eight southside Ontario youngsters, aged 14 to 18, were chosen from 30 applicants. The project is made possible through a $5,000 matching grant from the Community Services Department of San Bernardino County. The City of Ontario is matching the county amount with the contribution of administrative and staff time and some tools.

At a recent meeting, the Ontario City Council selected the clay model entitled "For Life" from five possible designs, all prepared by Keith Calvert, director of the Bon View center.

"For Life" represents an abstract of the human vertebrae and symbolically "represents strength and protection essential to the proper functioning of the human body."

Marla Cobb, recreation supervisor and project director who will work with project coordinator Calvert, explained the project's thrust for both the city and the young people.

"The project will refine the kids' interest in art, develop an appreciation of art and give them the opportunity to learn the process of art education through college workshops, classes at studios and museums and visits to community art galleries and the Laguna Art Festival," Mrs. Cobb said.

The completed form of "For Life" will be a four-foot bronze figure and will be exhibited at Ontario City Hall, and if the international exposition is approved, at Expo 81. Mrs. Cobb said the piece will also be exhibited at various museums.

While "For Life" is being cast, the young people will learn the rudimentary skills of carving, developing styles, observing mold-making and studying the process of foundry casting. They will assist Calvert in refining and polishing the sculpture after its casting.

The county grant is under a special program of innovative projects for disadvantaged youth. Mrs. Cobb pointed out that since Calvert did have the skills and expertise for an art project, the Ontario Recreation Department decided upon creative arts as the theme and purpose of its project.

She said it accomplishes a two-prong goal of providing work and educational instruction. All eight youngsters live within the Bon View Community Center service area, have a demonstrated interest in art through enrollment in junior high and high school classes and were recommended by various art teachers.

The project deadline is Sept. 30.

Diamond to star in special

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Neil Diamond will be starring in a 90-minute television special directed by William Friedkin, who made "The Exorcist."

The special, called "A Free Man in Paris," was conceived by Friedkin's wife, Jeanne Moreau, and depicts the adventures of a rock star on the loose in Europe.

NBC had advanced $1.5 million on the project.

Artist to show whaler's craft

Ontario artist Howard Ducksworth will give a demonstration of scrimshaw, the whaler's art, in the garden room of the Ontario Public Library at 7:30 p.m. Monday. Admission is free.

Ducksworth has been developing his talent since age 14 during his youth in Mississippi. Today, at 32, he is an employe of the City of Ontario as well as an art major at Chaffey College. He resides in Ontario with his wife Sharon and seven year old daughter Alycia.

Ducksworth is a skilled silversmith, ceramist and carver, but his specialty is scrimshaw and ceramic sculpture. The interest in scrimshaw was inspired by a chance meeting with an expert on the subject while on a clay expedition in the desert. One of his current teachers at Chaffey College, Mrs. Andree Mahoney, inspired him to pursue a degree in art in 1975.

Prior to college he did research on primitive arts of Africa as well as that of the Indians of the Americas, in connection with his interest in ceramic sculpture. He uses clays from diggings in Death Valley, Hemet, Alta Loma and Padua Hills. He fires all his work with cow dung, a method common among primitive tribes and the Indians. It more efficently cures and glazes his sculptured pieces in a period of two hours, rather than a week as required in modern gas kiln.

During August prize pieces of Ducksworth's many talents will fill the large showcase at the entrance of the library.

NOSTALGIC ART WORKS — "Turn-of-the-Century America," an exhibit now at New York's Whitney Museum, is striking for the prominent display given to work by women, such as Gertrude Kasebier's 1903 photograph of Evelyn Nesbit, left, and Rose O'Neill's "The Very Little Person."

Critic-at-large

Early woman as artist

By NORMAN NADEL

NEW YORK (NEA) — The name itself stirs sentiment and nostalgia: "Turn - of - the - Century America: Paintings, Graphics, Photographs, 1890-1910." People walk into the Whitney Museum of American Art as if they expected to be charmed right out of their skins.

Which, to a degree, they are. But charm is only one element of this major exhibition, which the J.C. Penney corporation has sponsored to mark its 75th anniversary. Outweighing charm is vitality, because those 20 years were times of discovery, upheaval, evolution and bit of revolution, much of which is captured in the 280 works on display.

Within that period, the nation's population grew from 63 million to almost 92 million, largely through immigration. More than 200,000 blacks migrated from the South to the North. People began the shift from farms to cities. The automobile, among other inventions, triggered massive changes. Unions were becoming a power. People began to speak up against child labor.

Women wondered if their place really was only in the home.

And a few of those wondering women were starting to make their mark in the arts, an area previously (and still, to a lesser extent) dominated by men.

In the 19th century, women who didn't have to keep house for a family, or support themselves, were permitted to study painting as a ladylike pastime. They were not expected to go after commissions and set up professional studios as the men did, though a few tried and succeeded.

As that century drew to a close, the participation of women in art became perceptibly more aggressive. It is to the credit of Patricia Hills, professor of Art History at York College, City University of New York, and curator of the new exhibition, that she has captured this fairly subtle influence in putting together her show.

According to Dr. Hills, turn-of-the-century women had little opportunity of making a career in the arts unless they had someone "strongly supportive," such as an encouraging and open-minded family, husband or teacher. Among the teachers who encouraged their female students as warmly as they did the males were painter Thomas Eakins, illustrator Howard Pyle, and Alfred Stieglitz, who was a photographer, editor and avant-garde gallery owner. In fact, when Stieglitz began publishing his magazine, Camera Work, the first photographer he selected to include was Gertrude Kasebier.

Of the few, but significant, female artists represented in "Turn-of-the-Century America," she, with eight prints included, is second only to painter Mary Cassatt, nine of whose works are on display. Cassatt's primacy is expected and undisputed; she is a dominant figure, regardless of sex, in American painting.

Nevertheless, Kasebier was a successful commercial photographer, whose subjects, in the Whitney show, include some of her fellow artists: photographer Baron de Meyer, illustrator Rose O'Neill (who originated the Kewpie Doll comic strip), and painters John Sloan and Robert Henri Circumstances Kasebier could not have anticipated draw the most attention to a photograph of a bare-shouldered showgirl, made in 1903. Her name: Evelyn Nesbit. Three years later her jealous husband, Pittsburgh millionaire Harry K. Thaw, shot and killed architect Stanford White, on the fashionable Madison Square roof garden, over White's earlier attentions to Evelyn.

Not all women whose works are exhibited were well-known in their time, although portrait painter Cecilia Beaux had many commissions from wealthy Philadelphians. The quiet genius of Alice Austen, who had been taking lyrical photos of scenes and people through and beyond that period, was not recognized until shortly before her death in 1952. She is represented in the show only by a Manhattan street scene, a meaningful photo but not her best.

Missing is any painting by New Englander Louise Herreshoff, more than 100 of whose remarkable oils and watercolors were discovered only after her death in 1967, when she was in her 90s.

It is an enjoyable show, sure to attract crowds at the Whitney through Oct. 2.

Artist shows varied styles

Sculptures, paintings, crafts objects and transformations by H. W. Kuhn are on exhibit through Oct. 16 at the California Museum of Science and Industry, Exposition Park, Los Angeles.

Following a serious illness, Kuhn turned to art as a means for self-exploration. In spiritual and mental growth he produced colorful abstracts that are modern art in its variety, still alive and relevant to the 1970s. He works in matters of paint, design and form with scenes of wild natural beauty indifferent or even hostile to man.

His landscapes range from soft comfortable realism of a winter forest to the harsh abstraction of a disjointed Grand Canyon. His sculptures consist of an eye-pleasing assembly of wooden chairs to a colorful primitive face painted on stone.

FOLK ARTISTS — Bob Webb and Dick Owings will give a concert of traditional American folk music in Memorial Park, Claremont, at 7:30 P.M. Monday. They perform on a variety of instruments.

Folksingers Bob Webb and Dick Owings will present a concert of traditional American folk music at Memorial Park, Claremont, at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

They will perform on the harp-guitar, duet concertina, fiddle, guitar, mandolin and five-string guitar. The duo's repertoire includes rural Southern string band music from the early part of this century; Appalachian ballads of love, bad men and railroad heroes, New England country dance pieces and fiddle tunes from all over America.

Webb, 30, is a native of Culver City. He has performed folk music for the past 12 years and owned a coffee house in San Diego in the early '70s. Owings, 28, earned a music degree at UCLA. The duo has played together for four years, first with The True & Trembling String Band and later as a duo. They recently returned from a month-long tour of the Pacific Northwest.

TURNING ON — These five professional actors will present the musical, "My Turn on Earth," in the California Theater of the Performing Arts, San Bernardino, at 8 p.m. Aug. 12 and 13. They are Candy Brand, Laurette Conkling, Susannah Lloyd (members of the King Family), Brad Murdoch and Philip Clayton.

'The Lincoln Conspiracy'

The century-old cover-up

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — There is a climate of suspicion abroad in the land. People, or many of them, keep looking for conspiracies, keep trying to find out who else was involved in the assassinations of the Kennedy Brothers, of Martin Luther King — and, as it turns out, even of Abraham Lincoln.

There is a movie coming out called "The Lincoln Conspiracy," which purports to shed new and startling light on the murder of President Lincoln. That tragic event occurred, as you all know, more than a century ago. How, then, can there be new evidence, after all these years?

David W. Balsiger was the prime mover in the research for the upcoming Sunn Classic film. His research credentials are only moderately impressive — he was an investigative reporter on a suburban Los Angeles newspaper and he researched and wrote nine books, including a couple on the possibility that Noah's Ark exists.

Still, Balsiger seems to have approached the subject from an intelligent premise. He reasoned that most historians base their work on what previous historians have written.

"My premise, based on what we all learned from Watergate," he says, "was that maybe what the government said originally back in 1869 wasn't true. Maybe there was a cover-up then, and all the historians from then on have been repeating the same cover-up story."

So he went to original sources, or as original as you can get 100 years later. He started with a genealogical search, finding descendants of people involved, going through their attics and documents. He went to collectors of Americana. He found some documents in the files of the Secret Service — it was called National Detective Police in Lincoln's day — that were still in code. He had them deciphered.

And he has come up with five points he says he can document, and which are genuinely startling:

1. There were four groups interested in eliminating Lincoln. John Wilkes Booth belonged to all four.

2. Secretary of War Edwin M. Stanton actively "assisted the coup along."

3. The cover-up was "orchestrated in Stanton's office."

4. Some vital evidence was suppressed, notably 18 pages of Booth's diary.

5. "The most shocking," according to Balsiger — the government shot the wrong man. A Booth lookalike was killed while Booth himself was never apprehended. "We think he lived 40 years more."

Balsiger worked on the project 13 months, then wrote a treatment on which the screenplay of the movie is based. He is now writing a book based on his findings, and the book, too, will be called "The Lincoln Conspiracy."

He believes that Booth was the trigger man, although his original intention, and the original intention of the conspiracy, was simply to kidnap the president. But it is the size of the conspiracy, and the ensuing cover-up, that Balsiger believes is the crux of his research.

He is now planning to ask for a Congressional investigation, based on his research.

But he is not planning to do any digging into any of the more recent controversial assassinations.

"I thought about digging into the Kennedy cases now," he says. "But I seriously doubt that I will — I think I'd rather stay alive."

LEWIS HOMES — SAN DIMAS, LA VERNE

From the city, high home prices

Lewis Homes offer 'escape'

Escape from the city, in the minds of many buyers, means escape from high home prices too, observes the head of a Southland building company.

"They add a further requirement, that the site of the new home be reasonably near the buyer's present place of business or employment," notes Richard A. Lewis, president of Lewis Homes.

He believes that both requisites are being fulfilled in his company's two residential developments in the adjacent towns of San Dimas and La Verne.

"The two sites are within easy commuting distance of both Los Angeles and Orange County," Lewis points out. "And though they offer an especially attractive environment for family living, land costs in that area have remained relatively stable, meaning that home prices tend to be considerably less.

The two communities — Lewis Homes-La Verne and Lewis Homes-San Dimas — display single-family residences featuring refrigerated air-conditioning.

Both developments are designed with three or four bedrooms, two or 2½ baths, large family rooms and wood-burning fireplaces. Also noted in various models are shake roofs, ceramic tile entries, mirrored master bedroom doors and luminous kitchen ceiling.

Lewis Homes-San Dimas prices range from $61,000 to $74,000. The site is reached by taking the San Bernardino Freeway to Route 210 Freeway, north to Foothill Freeway (210), east to San Dimas Ave., north to Base Line Road and right to the sales office.

Lewis Homes-La Verne, priced from $68,750 to $82,000, is reached by continuing on north on Route 210 Freeway to its end at Foothill Boulevard in La Verne. From there, the directions are east (right) one mile to Wheeler Avenue, left one block to Base Line and right to the models.

Fall occupancy is anticipated in the two developments. Sales offices are open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Color with care

Color is an important consideration when thinking about reroofing. The choice of color should be made carefully, advises the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association, because once the roof is installed, it's likely to be around for a good many years. Asphalt shingles in earthtone blends are today's growing trend.

Apartment owners urged to keep rent low

California apartment owners have been urged to keep rent increases at or below the cost of living increases reported by the federal government's Consumer Price Index.

In a resolution passed by the California Apartment Association's board of directors at its quarterly meeting in San Diego on Saturday, July 16, the group asked its 60,000 individual members to keep rent hikes in line with the Consumer Price Index, which is issued monthly by the U.S. Department of Labor and considered the most common cost-of-living indicator.

"Rents in California have traditionally been a bargain and we want to keep it that way," said Jack K. Wood, association president. "Governmental and private studies show rent increases have lagged far behind increases in the cost of living, gas and electric expenses and even family income."

Wood cited U.S. Department of Labor statistics which show that during the past five years, the typical family income has increased about 45 per cent, while rents have gone up only 26 per cent.

"During that same period, taxes have increased 63 per cent, natural gas 87 per cent and electricity 57 per cent, according to federal figures," he said.

"The California Apartment Association feels its members have done an excellent job in keeping rents down, especially in light of the rapidly escalating operating expenses and property prices," he added. "Rents have so far not followed the skyrocketing increases in home prices, which have gone up over 100 per cent in the last 10 years."

The California Apartment Association is the nation's largest state apartment association, representing 60,000 apartment owners and operators in 24 affiliated chapters throughout the state.

Annual convention slated in S.F.

Members of the apartment supply industry have been invited to exhibit at the California Apartment Association's 36th Annual Convention on October 14 and 15 in the San Francisco Civic Auditorium, San Francisco.

The convention, which is being presented by the largest state association of apartment owners in the nation, is expected to draw thousands of apartment owners, operators, builders, purchasing agents and investors from throughout the Western United States.

"More than 8,000 people attended our expositions in 1976, 1975 and 1974," said convention chairman James S. Morley of San Jose. "And this year we expect even more of these quantity buyers, since nearly half of the state's residents now live in apartments."

Concern up over nutrition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Concern is increasing over the foods Americans eat and the federal government should coordinate nutrition research programs now spread over 13 agencies, the General Accounting Office says.

The GAO statement was released in advance of six days of hearings on nutrition beginning today before a House science and technology subcommittee.

"The planning and conduct of human nutrition research is scattered throughout complex and diversified federal organizations, none of which provides comprehensive nutritional information," the GAO said.

The congressional auditing organization said although the federal government spends about $80 million annually on nutrition research, no agency has such work as its primary purpose.

It called on the executive branch and Congress to designate one agency to coordinate the studies, thereby avoiding duplication and making sure no area is left uncovered.

The GAO said more study of nutrition is inevitable by the government and by a growing number of university researchers in the field. As one exmple of an area for study, it said the impact of the current American diet on public health has never been evaluated adequately.

"Only since the end of World War II have people been systematically exposed to diets of processed, fabricated and fortified foods. Evidence is accumulating that among the consequences of modern dietary practices are several diseases and disorders arising in part from dietary excesses and imbalances," it said.

Nutrition studies now are conducted by or sponsored by seven agencies within the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, two agencies within the Agriculture Department, the Defense Department, Agency for International Development, National Science Foundation, National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Veterans Administration.

ORDINANCE NO. 2842

AN EMERGENCY ORDINANCE OF THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF POMONA, CALIFORNIA, EXTENDING THE MORATORIUM PERIOD OF ORDINANCE NO. 2784, 2801, 2804 AND 2823, FOR AN ADDITIONAL FOUR MONTHS.

WHEREAS, the Council of the City of Pomona, California, has determined that the C-ind. Zoning District is not the appropriate zoning district to place adult theaters and bookstores; and

WHEREAS, the Council has directed the Planning Staff and Commission to re-study their recommendation as to where such uses should be put in the City of Pomona, California, and such study has not been completed,

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED by the Council of the City of Pomona, California, as follows:

SECTION 1. That the moratorium placed upon the sexually oriented uses described in ordinances 2784, 2801, 2804 and 2823 shall be continued for an additional four months beginning July 21, 1977, to November 21, 1977. In all other respects the provisions of ordinances 2784, 2801, 2804 and 2823 shall remain in full force and effect.

SECTION 2. Pursuant to Section 510 of the Charter of the City of Pomona, this ordinance is declared to be an emergency ordinance for the immediate preservation of public peace, health and safety of the City of Pomona because of the proliferation of schools of physical contact activities, talk and encounter centers, adult bookstores, adult motion picture theaters, adult mini-motion picture theaters, and adult entertainment establishments and similar uses of land would not be beneficial unless properly regulated and assigned to certain zoning districts of the City not yet known until the above study is made.

SECTION 3. The City Clerk shall certify to the passage and adoption of this ordinance, causing it to be published as required by law, and it shall be in full force and effect.

APPROVED, PASSED AND ADOPTED this 18th day of July, 1977, as an EMERGENCY ORDINANCE.

JUNE 21, 1977

JUNE 21, 1977
TO: ALL HONDA AUTOMOBILE DEALERS
Gentlemen:

On May 3, 1977, we sent you a new price schedule reflecting an average price increase of 2.2% or $80.00 per car. The increase was effective on all cars invoiced on and after May 9, 1977.

Due to continued fluctuation in the exchange rate between the dollar and the yen, it is necessary that our prices be increased once again. The increase will average 4.0% or $148.00 per car.

The revised price schedule is attached and will become effective on all cars invoiced on and after July 15, 1977.

Sincerely,
AMERICAN HONDA MOTOR CO., INC.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — Instead of buying tire black for our pick-up truck tires, my husband uses my liquid floor wax and thinks it works wonders. — DEBI.

© 1977 by NEA, Inc.

DEAR POLLY — My eyesight is bad, so to thread a sewing machine needle I cut the thread straight across, rub the end with a drop of white glue and let it dry. Now I can thread the needle on the first try. A pair of tweezers helps in pulling the thread through. (This also works with an ordinary sewing needle.) — HAZEL.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — After taking a bath, try drying off all excess water with the wash cloth after you have squeezed the excess water out of it and your towel will not get so wet. — BESSIE.

DEAR POLLY — If you have no-wax flooring on which you put a sealer every four or five months, mark the date it was last applied on the sealer bottle. No more guesswork as to the time to use it again! — MRS. W.S.

DEAR POLLY — To keep candles from dripping, put them in the refrigerator for a few hours before using and you will find they do not drip. They'll also burn more evenly. — MRS. G.D.M.

DEAR POLLY — I use a clipboard when I write letters so I can sit anywhere and have a hard surface underneath my writing paper. I cut the return addresses from letters from those with whom I correspond regularly and have taped these to the top of the clipboard. — LILLIAN.

DEAR POLLY — Instead of using cleanser to remove greasy bathtub rings I use hair shampoo. I buy the cheapest shampoo by the half-gallon at a supermarket or discount store and find it does a great job on the tub and fixtures, too. No more scratchy cleansers for me. — ROSE.

DEAR POLLY — I find it easy and economical to make my own garlic salt. I mix one-third cup of garlic powder and two-thirds cup table salt. — PENNY.

DEAR POLLY — I have heard much discussion about the freezing of milk. My husband is a retired Navy career man, and when we were stationed in Guam we were taught to freeze milk in case of a typhoon, and have been doing it ever since. When in paper cartons, just freeze as-is and then put in a shallow dish to thaw when needed. It usually takes a half gallon about eight hours to thaw. Lift and shake and, when there is no ice, put in the refrigerator. ALWAYS shake before using. — MARIAN.

For A Darling

The easy stockinette stitch makes fast knitting of this lovely set. No. 5599 has knit directions for hat, sweater, bootees and mittens in Infant Size.

TO ORDER: Send 75c plus 25c for postage and handling with name, address, pattern number and size to PATTERNS (name of paper), P.O. Box 4989, Chicago, Ill. 60680.

NEWSPAPER STARS...

AT THE TOP OF A NEWSPAPER NEAR THE DATE LINE, YOU OFTEN SEE A ROW OF STARS. LARGE NEWSPAPERS ISSUE SEVERAL EDITIONS EACH DAY. THE STARS TELL HOW MANY EDITIONS HAVE BEEN ISSUED. THE FIRST EDITION USUALLY HAS NO STAR. THE 2ND WILL HAVE ONE STAR, AND SO ON. IN SMALLER TOWNS THERE ARE NOT SO MANY EDITIONS AND THE STAR SYSTEM IS NOT ALWAYS USED.

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:

ERIC JOHNSON OF CLANCY, MT, ASKS:

"WHY DOES A FIRE SMOKE?"

WHEN A LOG IN A FIREPLACE BURNS, SOME OF THE BURNING WOOD IS CHANGED INTO INVISIBLE GASES. THE HOT GASES RISE UP THE CHIMNEY AND DRIFT AWAY WITH THE AIR. USUALLY MANY TINY BITS OF ASH AND BLACK SPECKS OF UNBURNED CARBON, CALLED SOOT, ARE CARRIED AWAY IN THE RISING CLOUD OF GASES. THE SOOT AND ASH COLOR THE GASES GRAY AND MAKE THEM VISIBLE AS SMOKE.

© 1977 by NEA, Inc., T.M Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. 7/31

PRIZE WINNERS: DIANA PAULETTE GORE, OK — BILLY DEL HOMME LAFAYETTE, LA — TERESA BROOKS AMARILLO, TX — BRADLEY ROWE FREDERICK, OK

Boys and Girls,

Win one of these valuable prizes for the question answered here each week. Send your age and question to:

Richard Thomas, Emmy Award-winner for his portrayal of John Boy on The Waltons, and Tony Award-winner Cliff Gorman star in "The Silence," the true story of West Point Cadet James J. Pelosi who was officially ostracized by his classmates for allegedly violating the academy's honor code. The drama repeats on NBC, Sunday from 9:30 to 11PM. Thomas portrays Cadet Pelosi and Gorman co-stars as Stanley Greenberg, the screenwriter who conducts a series of interviews with Pelosi about his ordeal, following the cadet's graduation.

Ned Beatty (of "Nashville" and "Network") stars as Nick Szysznyk in a new five-episode comedy "Szysznyk," on CBS, Monday at 8:30PM. Beatty portrays a retired Marine who begins a new career as a Washington, D.C. community center supervisor, and soon discovers his new charges—the neighborhood youths who frequent the playground—are not as tractable as were his former recruits. Also starring with Beatty are Olivia Cole, Susan Lanier, Leonard Barr, Jarrod Johnson, Barry Miller, Scott Colomby and Thomas Carter.

David Huddleston stars (with Edie McClurg, Bonnie Ebsen, Pat Peterson and Peter Palmer) in The Kallikaks, another 5-episode comedy series on NBC, Wednesday at 9:30PM. The Kallikaks are a borderline southern family who move to "nowhere" California, buy a two-pump gas station and are constantly scheming to "beat the system." In the premiere episode, a Kallikaks plot to get on the Welfare roles conflicts with their scheme to join a major oil company franchise.

THE JOY OF WORK!

One of the few actors in Hollywood who is totally happy with his work and his life is Earl Holliman. Starring with Angie Dickinson, in NBC's highly successful Police Woman which goes into its fourth year this Fall (on NBC, Tuesdays at 9PM), Earl states unabashedly, "It's a joy to get up in the morning. I am doing exactly what I want to be doing at this particular time in my life."

Holliman and his co-star (Angie Dickinson) have a remarkable working relationship and Earl believes that one reason the show has been such a success is the great chemistry between them. He contends there is something intangible which comes across on the screen that makes the viewer wonder whether there may be more to their relationship than meets the eye, both on and off screen. In reality, Earl and Angie are good friends off screen—nothing more. Holliman credits producer Doug Benton with allowing them tremendous freedom to improvise, add subtle touches and ad lib, all of which has created an ambiance that has produced some of the better hours in television.

One of Hollywood's finest and most versatile actors, Holliman also is one of the most self-effacing. He claims to have been lucky and that things have always come easy for him in Hollywood. The truth is that Earl has worked hard for his success. He has always demanded the best of himself and will settle for nothing less. Earl knew he wanted to be an actor when he was six years old and there was never any doubt in his mind that he would eventually attain stardom. A dedicated professional, his motion picture, theatre and television credits are indeed impressive.

Perhaps Earl's love for his profession is exceeded only by his love for animals. As President of Actors and Others for Animals, he devotes many hours to this excellent organization dedicated to pet welfare. Holliman currently has two German Shepherds. Because he can't resist rescuing strays, there are often "temporary" boarders until he can find homes for them.

Earl devoted much of his hiatus this past Spring to putting together a dinner-dance at the Hollywood Palladium for the benefit of Actors and Others for Animals. With a '40s motif, big band charts of all the top songs from that era, and guest singers such as Dick Haymes, the affair was a smashing success and raised a great deal of money for the organization.

As a result, Holliman was honored by the City of Los Angeles when Mayor Bradley presented him with a resolution which commended him for "his humanitarian efforts in furthering the welfare of all animals, as well as his dedication to his profession and the pleasure he has brought to millions of people throughout the world."

Although Earl is looking forward to his fourth season of Police Woman, he is beginning to think about the future. "When this series ends, I'd like to do a half-hour situation comedy. People forget that I do comedy," Holliman explained. Those who have seen him sing and dance on the "People's Choice Awards" and the John Davidson Show believe he would do well in a variety series. There is one thing certain, whatever Earl Holliman decides to do, he will continue to make us laugh and cry and applaud his multi-faceted talents.

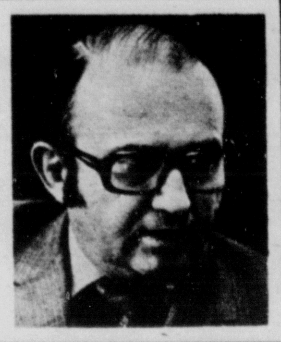
ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.



FOR JAMES H. SAMMONS, executive vice president, American Medical Association

How does American medical science compare with that in other countries?—R.S., Bangor, Maine

● Life expectancy in the U.S. is among the highest in the world, but perhaps our greatest strength lies in our sophisticated technology and research. Furthermore, each year our ability to cope with, and sometimes even conquer, disease is improved. Since World War II we can claim that American medical science is second to none.

FOR CAROL BURNETT, comedienne

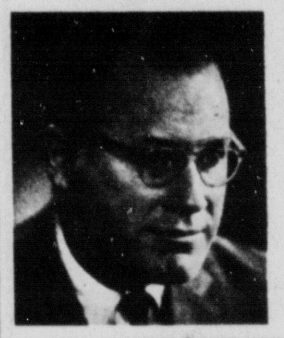
What do you treasure most of all?—C.J., Sacramento, Calif.

● Couldn't have answered that a couple of years ago because until then material things held no value for me. Now it's different. I recently had some oils done of the kids. If I had to leave my house in a hurry, they'd be the first things I'd grab. The French artist did a superb job of transferring to canvas certain childhood expressions that even the camera can't seem to capture.

FOR PATRICIA HARRIS, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development

If our cities continue to expand, will there be any countryside left by our nation's Tricentennial?—H.J., Rapid City, S.D.

● I don't think we'll run out of land in America. For one thing, population growth has declined substantially in recent decades. There'll be continued growth, but much of it will take place in the West and Southwest, where there is still plenty of room for expansion.



FOR BOWIE K. KUHN, Commissioner of Baseball

What is your earliest sporting recollection?—S.B., Gary, Ind.

● The 1933 Series between the Washington Senators and the New York Giants. I was 6 and living in Washington. The four-to-one Giant sweep did nothing to diminish my enthusiasm. My childhood baseball heroes were Judge Landis, the Commissioner of Baseball, and three Washington Senators players during the 30's and 40's: Buddy Lewis, Cecil Travis and Dutch Leonard.

FOR JOHNNY MATHIS, singer

I hear you have a sensational kitchen. Are you a good cook?—W.M., Galveston, Texas

● Since my parents were professional cooks for a wealthy San Francisco family, I learned to enjoy and cook good food at an early age, but I wouldn't call myself a gourmet cook. I'm a private person, and rather than eat out all the time, I prefer to have my friends over and feed them myself. When I had my kitchen remodeled, I insisted it have all the best gadgets and appliances, with enough room so my guests could sit comfortably.

FOR VALERIE BERTINELLI, teenage star of television's One Day at a Time

Are you going steady? What do you look for in a man?—S.M., Asbury, N.J.

● I've been going out with the same boy for about four months. He's an actor and was once on the show. My idea of an attractive man is one who cares about me and is interested in what I'm doing. He must have a good sense of humor and be someone who's ready to listen when I want to talk. He must also need me because I need to be needed.

FOR PATRICIA WARREN, author of The Fancy Dancer

What factors are responsible for your producing your best work?—M.W., York, Pa.

● I work best under pressure—a deadline, need of money or whatever. Also, I need to be in a state of excited concentration that psychologists call "flow." Finally, I need privacy—even from my cats. There's a myth that cats are helpful to writers. Not true. Six Abyssinians can rearrange your manuscript, pull out your typewriter ribbon and play with your pencils—all simultaneously.

FOR LEW PRINCE, designer

How do you feel about the American fashion industry copying the Paris houses?—Joan Bonwin, Washington, D.C.

● I'm against it. It's high time American designers injected their own personalities into their clothes and not play second fiddle to another country. We know what our women want more than strangers do. We should all stand on our own two feet, not walk in someone else's footsteps.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Is it true that Abbott and Costello died broke?—D.H., Flint, Mich.

● Yes. Both comics lived too high, gambled too much and were in hock to Uncle Sam when they died. Did you know, by the way, that Lou Costello paid for Dean Martin's nose job? The comedian backed Martin's career before he teamed with Jerry Lewis. If you're interested in Abbott and Costello, you might want to read more of these unknown tidbits in Bob Thomas's new biography of the team, Bud & Lou: The Abbott and Costello Story.

I've heard that your state has problems growing trees. Why is that?—Bill Hill, Langdon, N.D.

● South Dakota is an arid state, and trees do not grow readily. Those that are here were probably planted many years ago by pioneers, early farmers and ranchers as shelterbelts. In western South Dakota, however, the Black Hills are heavily populated with trees.

PRO AND CON

Should Our Schools Place More Emphasis on Consumer Education?

PRO S. John Byington, chairman, Consumer Product Safety Commission

Yes. Unfortunately, most adults receive their consumer education "after the fact" — after sustaining a product-related injury, after purchasing a product that may live up to one advertising claim but falls short in other aspects, after purchasing the most expensive product only to find that a less-expensive model would have been adequate. With today's marketplace becoming more complex and impersonal, many consumers feel intimidated. Therefore, students should be taught how to get the best value for their money, comparative-shopping techniques, how to evaluate product information and their rights and responsibilities as consumers.

CON Professor Miro M. Todorovich, physicist and executive secretary of University Centers for Rational Alternatives

No. What well-meaning advocates of consumer education miss is that a person is only as good as his basic skills. One who reads haltingly and cannot organize his thoughts is a poor bet for any task. An alert consumer needs to read labels or contracts with reasonably good comprehension, be appropriately persuasive when writing complaints and be sufficiently familiar with the mathematics needed for an understanding of basic economics. This means that schools should do best what they should do first: educate well-articulated, well-read and logically sharpened minds. The rest will follow naturally with life itself constituting the ultimate classroom.

BENJI: THE IRRESISTIBLE MILLION-DOLLAR MUTT

Grown men get misty-eyed at his antics, women weep unashamedly at his adventures and children shriek with joy and excitement at whatever he does.

By Anita Summer

Benji is a superstar. But what sets him apart from human superstars is that, without uttering a word, he achieved fame and fortune with his first film and became a household name overnight.

He's mobbed wherever he goes. At the recent Dallas, Texas, world premiere of For the Love of Benji, hosts of luminaries were flown in for a celebration. Locals ringed the theater hours before show time, greeting each celebrity with loud applause. But when Benji appeared, the cheer rivaled the roar of the SST. Surrounded by admirers of all ages, the canine star gave a few pertinent "Rf, Rfs" into the mike. In the theater, he watched, just like everyone else. But unlike everyone else, he treated himself to a short snooze halfway through his movie.

Later, at the jammed champagne party, such notables as Cindy Williams, Lorne Greene, Yvette Mimieux, Stacey Keach, George Kennedy, Rudy Vallee, Greer Garson, Julie Newmar and Art Linkletter almost fell over each other in their eagerness to be photographed with Benji, who good-naturedly posed for hundreds of shots, keeping his cool, turning this way and that as ordered, shaking hands, kissing, standing, sitting, saluting.

At dinner, he sat in a chair next to Lassie, his mentor, inspiration and best friend. In fact, his silver-mesh collar, studded with simulated sapphires, carried a tag inscribed: "To Benji, from Lassie." Benji dined on steak, cottage cheese, apples and vanilla ice cream — his favorite flavor — washed down with slurps of water from a glass. His table manners are beyond reproach.

So how did the Benji legend begin?

Frank Inn, 61, the floppy-eared mutt's "father, owner and trainer," has trained animals for TV and films for 30 years. He flashbacked to 1960 when the Burbank Animal Shelter called to say, "We've got a new puppy we think you should have." Inn got the hidden message: If someone doesn't give this puppy a home, he will be put to sleep. Inn raced off. When he returned cradling the six-week, furry bundle, a mixture of cocker, poodle and schnauzer, he had no idea he held a potential gold mine and future superstar in his arms. Inn reared and trained the pup, along with the 1,000 other animals at his sprawling, 2½-acre Sun Valley, Calif., home.

The next year, when TV's Petticoat Junction needed a dog, Benji got the job and was known as Higgins.

In the early 70's, director Joe Camp asked Inn if he could star Higgins in the title role of a movie. Inn refused, feeling the dog was ready for retirement. Camp persuaded Inn to un-retire him. The result was a new canine hero — Benji.

Finally, last year, at 16, Benji retired. In the tradition of all the other animal greats, he handed over his name, title, status and fans to his son, who is following in his father's pawsteps and stars in the $2.2 million production, For the Love of Benji.

Until now, Benji — present at the interview — was resting, head down, with a faraway look in his limpid brown eyes. "That's because he's heard this story so many times, it sends him to sleep," said Inn. "Right, Benji?" "Woof, woof," agreed the actor, sitting up. "He gets bored if he has nothing to say," Inn remarked.

Asked, "What do you do first thing in the morning?" Benji gave a wide, long, yawn.

"Last thing at night?" Down went Benji's head, between his paws. Anyone could tell he was saying his prayers.

"Shake your head" resulted in a unique movement that should take its place in show business alongside John Wayne's walk, Bette Davis's flounce and Elvis Presley's wiggle.

Benji, whose adoring eyes never leave Inn's face, squelches the myth that dogs only obey and have no capacity to calculate. "He's been in some tight corners on location, and he got himself out of them by thinking," said Inn. "When Joe [Camp] says 'cut,' he relaxes, like a soldier hearing 'at ease.' His muscles go limp. Benji loves to go fishing; he helps me pull in the catch. He places his foot on the 12-foot line every couple of feet, to make the tugging-in easier. I never trained him to do that. He reasoned it out."

On trips abroad, Inn takes along the vet who has cared for Benji from puppyhood: "In case anything happened, we want to have a man who knows Benji."

The only times the pooch is out of Inn's sight are when they're on the road and he and his wife Juanita (she's a trainer, too) go out for a late dinner. Inn scoffs at the idea of dognappers: "Anyone who wants a Benji can get one at his local animal shelter for $5. Our biggest fear is he'll get hurt by fans who want to pluck hairs from his back for souvenirs." When Benji travels to a movie location, he's insured for the amount of the film; when he's on tour, he's valued at $250,000.

Although most restaurants have a firm "no dogs" rule, Benji is an exception. He sits at the table, eats off Inn's plate, drinks from his glass and shares the silverware.

Left out of the conversation, Benji decided on a little shut-eye. Inn, however, would have none of that. "Benji", he said sternly, "where are your manners? Say you're sorry." Quick as a flash came an apologetic "bowow." He perked up again when the waitress took Inn's order. "Benji insists on tasting what I'm eating," he reported, handing over a piece of fruit on a spoon, which Benji demolished.

At home, our acting mutt has one square meal a day, like any nonacting dog. (When in training or traveling, he has the same, plus rewards: little pieces of steak every time he masters a new trick. That means he has a double intake, but he burns up food twice as fast.) He dines on canned horse meat, beef and lamb, baby foods mixed with table fare, and distilled water.

As Benji and his celebrity peers know, autographs are part of the price of fame. "Sign your name, please, Benji?" asked Inn, placing an ink pad and paper in front of him. Benji flattened his paw on the pad, then pressed it down on the paper, leaving a perfect pawprint. "Woof?" he queried. "He wants to know if that's all," interpreted Inn, cleaning off Benji's paw, which meant that was all.

"When the first Benji book came out," Inn continued, "we took him to a store to sign paperbacks. Five hundred books later, Benji was fast asleep, yet still doing his job — automatically hitting the ink pad, and then the book." That's when a rubber stamp was made of Benji's "signature." Although there's no official Benji Fan Club, hundreds of letters are sent to him and Mulberry Square Productions, where each one is personally answered.

Time for the next appointment — an appearance at the Dallas Convention Hall. Said Inn, flourishing brush and comb: "First thing I do each morning is groom Benji. When we tour or do shows, I give him a quick once-over before we go on stage." He's bathed twice a week and gets his feet washed any time he's out in the mud or rain.

The second dog named to the American Humane Association's Animal Hall of Fame — first was Lassie in the 60's — happily trotted along on a leash. (While he has only two collars, he has dozens of leashes, all matching Inn's outfits.) He gravitates toward children more quickly than toward grown-ups Inn observed. "The love they give is natural and uninhibited. Dogs sense that and respond."

Will there be a third Benji film after For the Love of Benji? That's still undecided, but whatever acting Benji does next, chances are it'll be an all-action role. "Benji likes to move around; he can't stand sedentary parts," said Inn. "Right, Benji?" The actor nodded.

Meanwhile, you may want to try your luck at molding a future, four-legged star. You may also have noticed that strays and foundlings seem to be making it these days (Morris the cat, Sandy the dog in the Tony Award-winning Broadway musical Annie). Here are a couple of tips from Inn, who spent a 13-year apprenticeship with Rudd Weatherwax, Lassie's trainer, and has to his credit Cleo on The People's Choice, Pyewacket in Bell, Book and Candle, Tramp in My Three Sons, Arnold the pig in Green Acres, Rhubarb the cat in Breakfast at Tiffany's, Waldo in Nanny and the Professor and the complete animal menagerie on the Beverly Hillbillies: "First check the eyes; go for dark ones. Light ones can't be trusted, nor those that don't look straight ahead. Train the dog to walk on a leash. Pups have human traits; they're brave or cowardly, smart or dumb. But they all have to be taught." The best place to pick up a pet, said Inn, is your local animal shelter. FW

Grow Strawberries Big As Tea Cups!

OUTSTANDING NEW VARIETY

Treat yourself to the biggest, most luscious-tasting strawberries you've ever had a chance to pop into your mouth. These are Quinault Everbearing berries and they grow as big as tea cups! They are a firm, deep red berry - - a mouth-watering delight for desserts, preserves, freezing and eating fresh.

QUINAULT EVERBEARING STRAWBERRIES ARE LONG BEARING, AND HEAVY PRODUCING. You begin harvesting these big, sweet beauties in June, only 6 to 10 weeks after planting. They continue to bear all summer until a killing frost in the fall! The Quinault is an excellent home garden variety. It is hardy and drought resistant. It was developed in conjunction with Washington State University. When tested in 13 states and Canada it was found to have an excellent performance record for size, taste, plant growth and freedom from disease. This outstanding berry could well become the most popular strawberry ever developed.

INCLUDE STRAWBERRIES IN YOUR GARDEN

Even if you don't raise a garden - - you should grow strawberries if at all possible. They are not hard to grow. Yet they produce the greatest all around fruit for family eating enjoyment. Imagine eating fresh, juicy strawberry shortcakes, jams - - or fresh with cream and sugar! In these days of high food prices a strawberry patch is an especially good investment. And you don't have to wait years to begin harvesting this fruit crop! Strawberries are especially nourishing. They provide even more Vitamin C than an equal weight of orange juice!

WHAT TO DO WHEN YOU ARE SHORT OF SPACE AND STILL WANT STRAWBERRIES

A small space - - as little as 9' X 12' - - will produce all of the berries that an average sized family will need. Even if you don't have a few feet of space you can still have strawberries. Drill holes in a small nail keg. Fill it with dirt and put plants in the holes. This is a decorative and good way to grow many delicious berries in a very small space. Trellises and strawberry pyramids can also be used when space is limited. Or simply plant strawberries along the front of your flower bed for an interesting and productive edging.

CAUTION — The most frequently noted "complaint" we have on these marvelous berries is that most people just didn't think to order enough! Honestly - - you will want at least 50 of these plants to start even for smaller patches. ORDER PLENTY. You receive strong, well-rooted, field-grown plants from virus-free stock which means superior fruit, double yields and increased plant vigor. ORDER NOW — — ENJOY ALL THE STRAWBERRIES YOU CAN EAT THIS SUMMER.

DANGER, POISON!

Half of all accidental deaths to children are due to poisoning. Do you know how to prevent your child from becoming a victim and what to do if he should swallow a foreign substance?

By Alvin N. Eden, M.D.

More children die from accidents than from the five leading childhood illnesses put together. And an estimated 50 percent of these accidents are due to the swallowing of a poisonous substance.

Most poisonings take place in the home. The most commonly ingested poisons are medicines and household cleaners. Although the list of products that can poison a youngster is endless, the following eight make up a large majority of all poisonings and must always be kept out of reach:

- Insecticides
- Kerosine
- Medicines, especially aspirin and barbiturates
- Turpentine
- Laundry bleach
- Furniture polish
- Cosmetics
- Rubbing alcohol

Here are a few rules that must be followed by parents of small children:

1) Store all medicines in a locked cabinet or on a very high shelf.

2) Throw out old, unused medicine.

3) Never give medication to your child in a dark room.

4) Label all medicines.

5) Don't keep cleansers under sinks.

6) Never leave small children unattended near medications or near potentially dangerous household products.

An amazing statistic: One out of every two youngsters who poisons himself does so a second time. That happens because the parents not only had not taken the proper precautions the first time but also didn't learn anything from the first accident.

There is no such thing as a "universal antidote." The so-called foolproof antidote composed of a mixture of burnt toast, weak tea and milk of magnesia is worthless, so forget about it.

If your child swallows something that may be poisonous, in most cases make him vomit immediately by using syrup of ipecac, a product every household should have. Give the youngster one tablespoon and some milk. He usually will vomit within minutes. If you do not have syrup of ipecac, give him some milk, hold him face down over your lap and put your finger down his throat. Call your doctor for further instructions.

The only exception to the rule of inducing vomiting is when your child has ingested a petroleum product, such as kerosine, or a lye, such as a drain cleaner. In these cases, follow the instructions on the label or give him some milk and immediately take him to the hospital. (Be sure to take the bottle or box of poison along to show to the doctor.)

You should suspect your child may have been poisoned in the following situations:

- If he is seen or found with an empty container.
- If he acts strangely, especially with stains or burns around the mouth.
- If there is vomiting, abdominal pain, drowsiness, rapid breathing, convulsions or unconsciousness.

In such cases, immediately call your doctor for advice. Poison control centers have been established in many cities and are often associated with departments of health. Find out if your community has such a center, and if it does, keep the telephone number available (and where your baby sitter can also find it). These poison control centers have trained personnel who can answer your questions if your child has swallowed a foreign substance. Giving them the specific name of the product as well as the quantity swallowed will help them tell you what to do.

How to persuade total strangers to send millions of dollars to your home

"With a small investment and the Recipe to Riches you can just about decide how rich you want to be"

by Richard Suarez

How would you like the postman to bring your daily mail in a big truck? But instead of bills, he'd be bringing you money. Thousands of dollars every day. And if you're a little shy, don't worry. You'll never have to meet the people who send the money. They'll all be total strangers.

It's not just a daydream. Because that's what happens to me every day. And if you continue to read this article, I'm going to tell you exactly how to make the same thing happen to you!

HOW I DID IT

Let me begin by saying that I'm no different than you. My father isn't wealthy and I didn't inherit a million from a rich uncle. In 1973, I was

Richard Suarez and his wife LuAnn

22 years old. I lived in a $70 a month apartment next to a laundry. The sounds of mice crawling in my toaster to eat bread crumbs kept me awake at night. The phrase 'net worth' was a joke to me. I was in debt. My most expensive possession was a '65 Dodge, worth $150.

But less than 46 months later, all that had changed. I now own four cars. I have two boats – an 18 ft. high powered speed boat and a 22 ft. open house boat. I live in a $100,000 home overlooking a beautiful lake. I'm president and owner of Consumer Publishing Company, Inc. The home of C.P.C. is the 37,000 sq. ft. Suarez building, located on the main street of downtown Canton. And at age 26, I have a net worth, certified by a public accountant, of over $1,000,000. How did I do it? Well, it wasn't a miracle or luck. I just followed the Recipe to Riches.

ABOVE LEFT: Before I used my Recipe to Riches, I owned a 1965 Dodge worth $150. ABOVE: After using my Recipe, I now own a $20,000 Porche 911-S, a mint condition 1960 Triumph TR-3, a Mercedez Benz 280 SL Coupe, and a Monte Carlo Landau.

WHAT IS THE RECIPE TO RICHES?

The Recipe to Riches is a system I've used to make lots of money. But it was specially designed for people who had little start up money like myself. You don't have to be a genius to use it. I never took a business or marketing course in my life. And you make money while working out of your home. Even if your results are bringing you millions of dollars in sales, you can still work out of your own home with just a few members of your family and some friends.

HOW DOES THE RECIPE TO RICHES WORK?

It works exactly like a cake recipe. When you follow the recipe step by step, you get a delicious cake. When you follow my Recipe, you don't make a cake – you just make lots of money.

My Recipe to Riches has two parts. Part I is a system for coming up with product ideas – like the Pet Rock. Part II shows you how to persuade total strangers to send you money for the products you come up with in Part I.

Part I of my Recipe does not involve genius, creativity or inspiration. In fact, the three product ideas which have generated over $12,000,000 in total sales for my company had already been discovered. Millions of people knew about these three products, but they were considered 'losers.' Part I of my Recipe told me that they had the potential to become big winners.

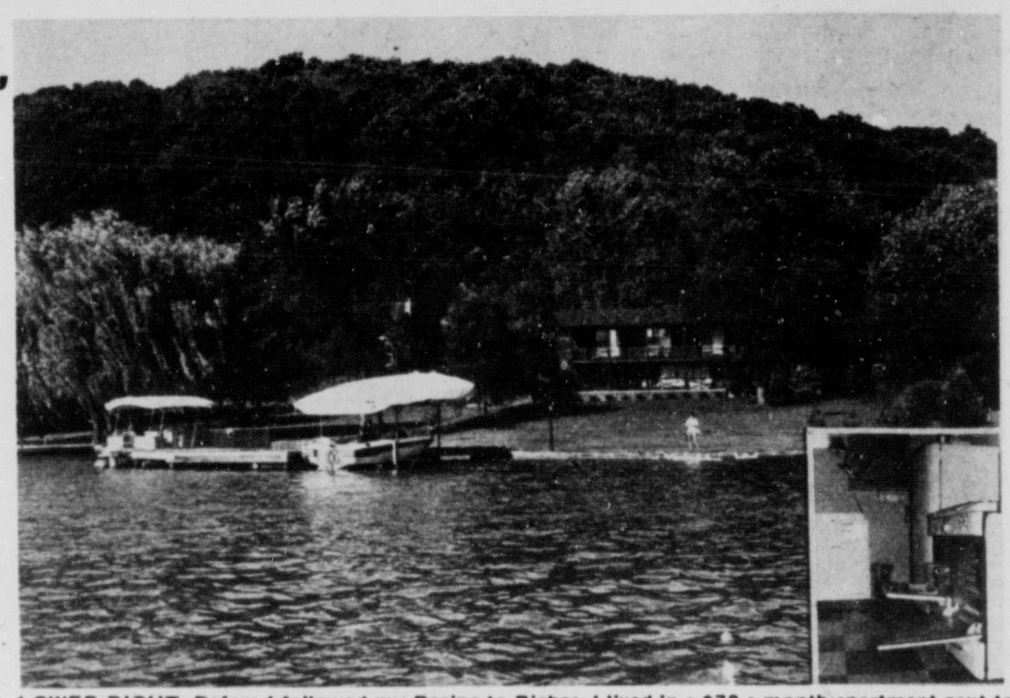
But that's where Part II of my Recipe comes in. With Part II of my system, I gave these three 'losing' products a new twist. After giving them a new twist, Part II of my Recipe then showed me step by step how to persuade total strangers to send me over $12,000,000 for these three products.

YOU CAN DO IT!

Why am I so sure you can get rich following my Recipe? Because if I did it, so can you. I'm living, breathing proof that my Recipe to Riches works. My Recipe can work for anyone. If you're young, you can do it. I'm only 26. If you're old, you can do it. I made a million in less than 46 months. So even if you're 60, you can make it before you hit retirement age. If you feel your sex, race or nationality is holding you back, don't worry. With my Recipe, you don't meet your customers. There's no chance for prejudice. And your supervisor or boss can't hold you back – you're your own boss.

WHY AM I REVEALING MY SECRET?

My Recipe to Riches has made me a millionaire. You may be wondering why I'd be willing to give it out. I have two very good reasons. First, at age 26, I'm too young to retire. I'd like to continue to work and improve my financial position. Second, over 100 people work at my company, Consumer Publishing. I need to constantly come up with new ideas to keep the work coming in.



LOWER RIGHT: Before I followed my Recipe to Riches, I lived in a $70 a month apartment next to a laundry. That's a picture of my 3' x 6' kitchen. ABOVE: After following my Recipe, I now live in a $100,000 home overlooking a beautiful lake. That's my wife feeding our pet ducks in our back yard.

HOW RICH CAN YOU GET?

The amount of money you make is entirely up to you. My Recipe to Riches is very flexible. You start with a small investment. The first big winner I came up with by following my Recipe, only took $40 to test.

You can follow my Recipe to Riches and still keep your present job. You work out of your home. As more and more money starts pouring in, you make a decision. You can hold down the amount of money and just do it as a hobby. You could make an extra $5,000 to $20,000 a year and still keep the security of your old job. Or you could quit your job and follow my Recipe full time. Of course you could make much more.

When your sales figures get really big, in the millions of dollars a year, you could build a big company like I have. Or farm out your work and still run it from your own home with family and friends. It's all explained step by step in my Recipe.

I realize my Recipe sounds so good that it's hard to believe. That's why I've included the photographs and certified statement in this article. The proof is in black and white before your very eyes. You'll be sending your order to Consumer Publishing, which is pictured at right. Our phone number is (216) 455–1621. Call up and ask any questions you like. Or stop in and see us if you're ever in Canton, Ohio to visit the Pro-Football Hall of Fame.

I'm going to ask you to send $10 for my Recipe to Riches. But since my Recipe is going to tell you step by step how to persuade people to send thousands or possibly millions of dollars to your home, it will be worth much more than $10 to you.

Certified Statement

This is to certify that based on current fair market values Richard Suarez has a net worth in excess of $1,000,000. Consumer Publishing, which is owned by Richard Suarez, had total sales of more than $12,000,000 between August 1973 and May 1977.

Jack H. Blakeslee
Public Accountant

Your $10 investment will be protected by my personal guarantee. After you receive my Recipe, if you're dissatisfied in any way, simply return it to me. You'll receive a $10 check with my signature on it immediately by return mail. That's my personal 100% no risk guarantee.

Up until now, my Recipe has been kept strictly confidential. It is not available in any bookstore, anywhere in the world. But if you wish to learn my secret, you can receive it directly from me.

HOW CAN YOU GET THE RECIPE?

If you wish to order my Recipe to Riches, simply do this: Write "Recipe to Riches" and your name and address on a piece of paper and send it along with $10 in cash, check or money order. (Make checks payable to Consumer Publishing.) If you have Master Charge or VISA, you may charge your purchase by sending the following information: A. name of card B. credit card number C. card expiration date.

ABOVE RIGHT: Before I followed my Recipe to Riches, Consumer Publishing was run out of the basement of this rented home. My sister's family lived upstairs. ABOVE: After following my Recipe, I now run Consumer Publishing out of the 37,000 sq. ft. Suarez building located on the main street of downtown Canton, Ohio.

Mail your orders to CONSUMER PUBLISHING, 401 Market Ave. N., Dept. C–69, Canton, Ohio 44750.

Right this second, your biggest enemy is indecision. Don't go through the rest of your life wondering if you could have made it big. I know you can do it; because I made a million following the exact Recipe I'm going to send you. Since you are covered by my personal money back guarantee, you've got nothing to lose –– but think how much you can make! So send for my Recipe to Riches right this minute, while you're thinking about it. *

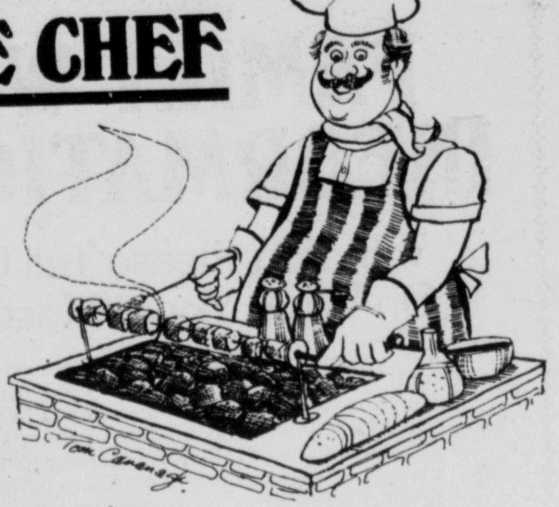
EASY-DOES-IT IDEAS FOR THE BARBECUE CHEF

Most of us enjoy outdoor cooking so much that by midsummer we have repeatedly used favorite recipes. Here are some new ideas you might try.

By Marilyn Hansen



SAUSAGE MIXED GRILL

1 lb. Italian sausage, sweet or hot
1 lb. knackwurst
1 lb. kielbasa or other smoked sausage
1 lb. smoked sausage links
2 teaspoons caraway seed
½ cup beer
1½ cups bottled hickory barbecue sauce

1. Place Italian sausage in skillet with 2 cups water. Heat to boiling, cover, reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes until cooked through. Drain.

2. Cut Italian sausage, knackwurst, kielbasa and sausage links into 2-inch chunks. Thread sausages crosswise alternately on 8 skewers.

3. Mix caraway seeds, beer and barbecue sauce. Place skewers on grill 4 to 5 inches from gray coals and cook about 8 to 10 minutes on each side, basting with sauce until well browned.

4. Serve with any remaining sauce heated as a dip.

Makes 8 servings

FISHERMAN'S KEBAB

1 lb. thickly sliced fish fillets (cod, haddock, bluefish, bass)*
1 lb. medium shrimp, cleaned
1 lb. sea scallops
4 onions, peeled and cut into chunks
2 green peppers, seeded and cut into chunks
8 cherry tomatoes
Bottled Caesar salad dressing
Lemon wedges

1. Cut fish fillets into 1½-inch chunks. On four skewers, alternately thread fish chunks, shrimp, scallops, onion, green pepper and cherry tomatoes.

2. Brush with Caesar dressing. Place on oiled grill 4 to 5 inches from gray coals and cook 3 to 5 minutes on each side until done, basting frequently with dressing. Serve with lemon wedges.

Makes 4 servings

*If fillets are thin, stack two together.

PARMESAN CHEESE LOAF

¾ cup butter or margarine, softened
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
¼ teaspoon instant minced garlic or 1 small garlic clove, crushed
¼ teaspoon basil leaves
1 tablespoon chopped parsley or 1½ teaspoons parsley flakes
1 loaf French bread (12 to 14 inches long)

1. In small bowl, blend butter, cheese, garlic and seasonings.

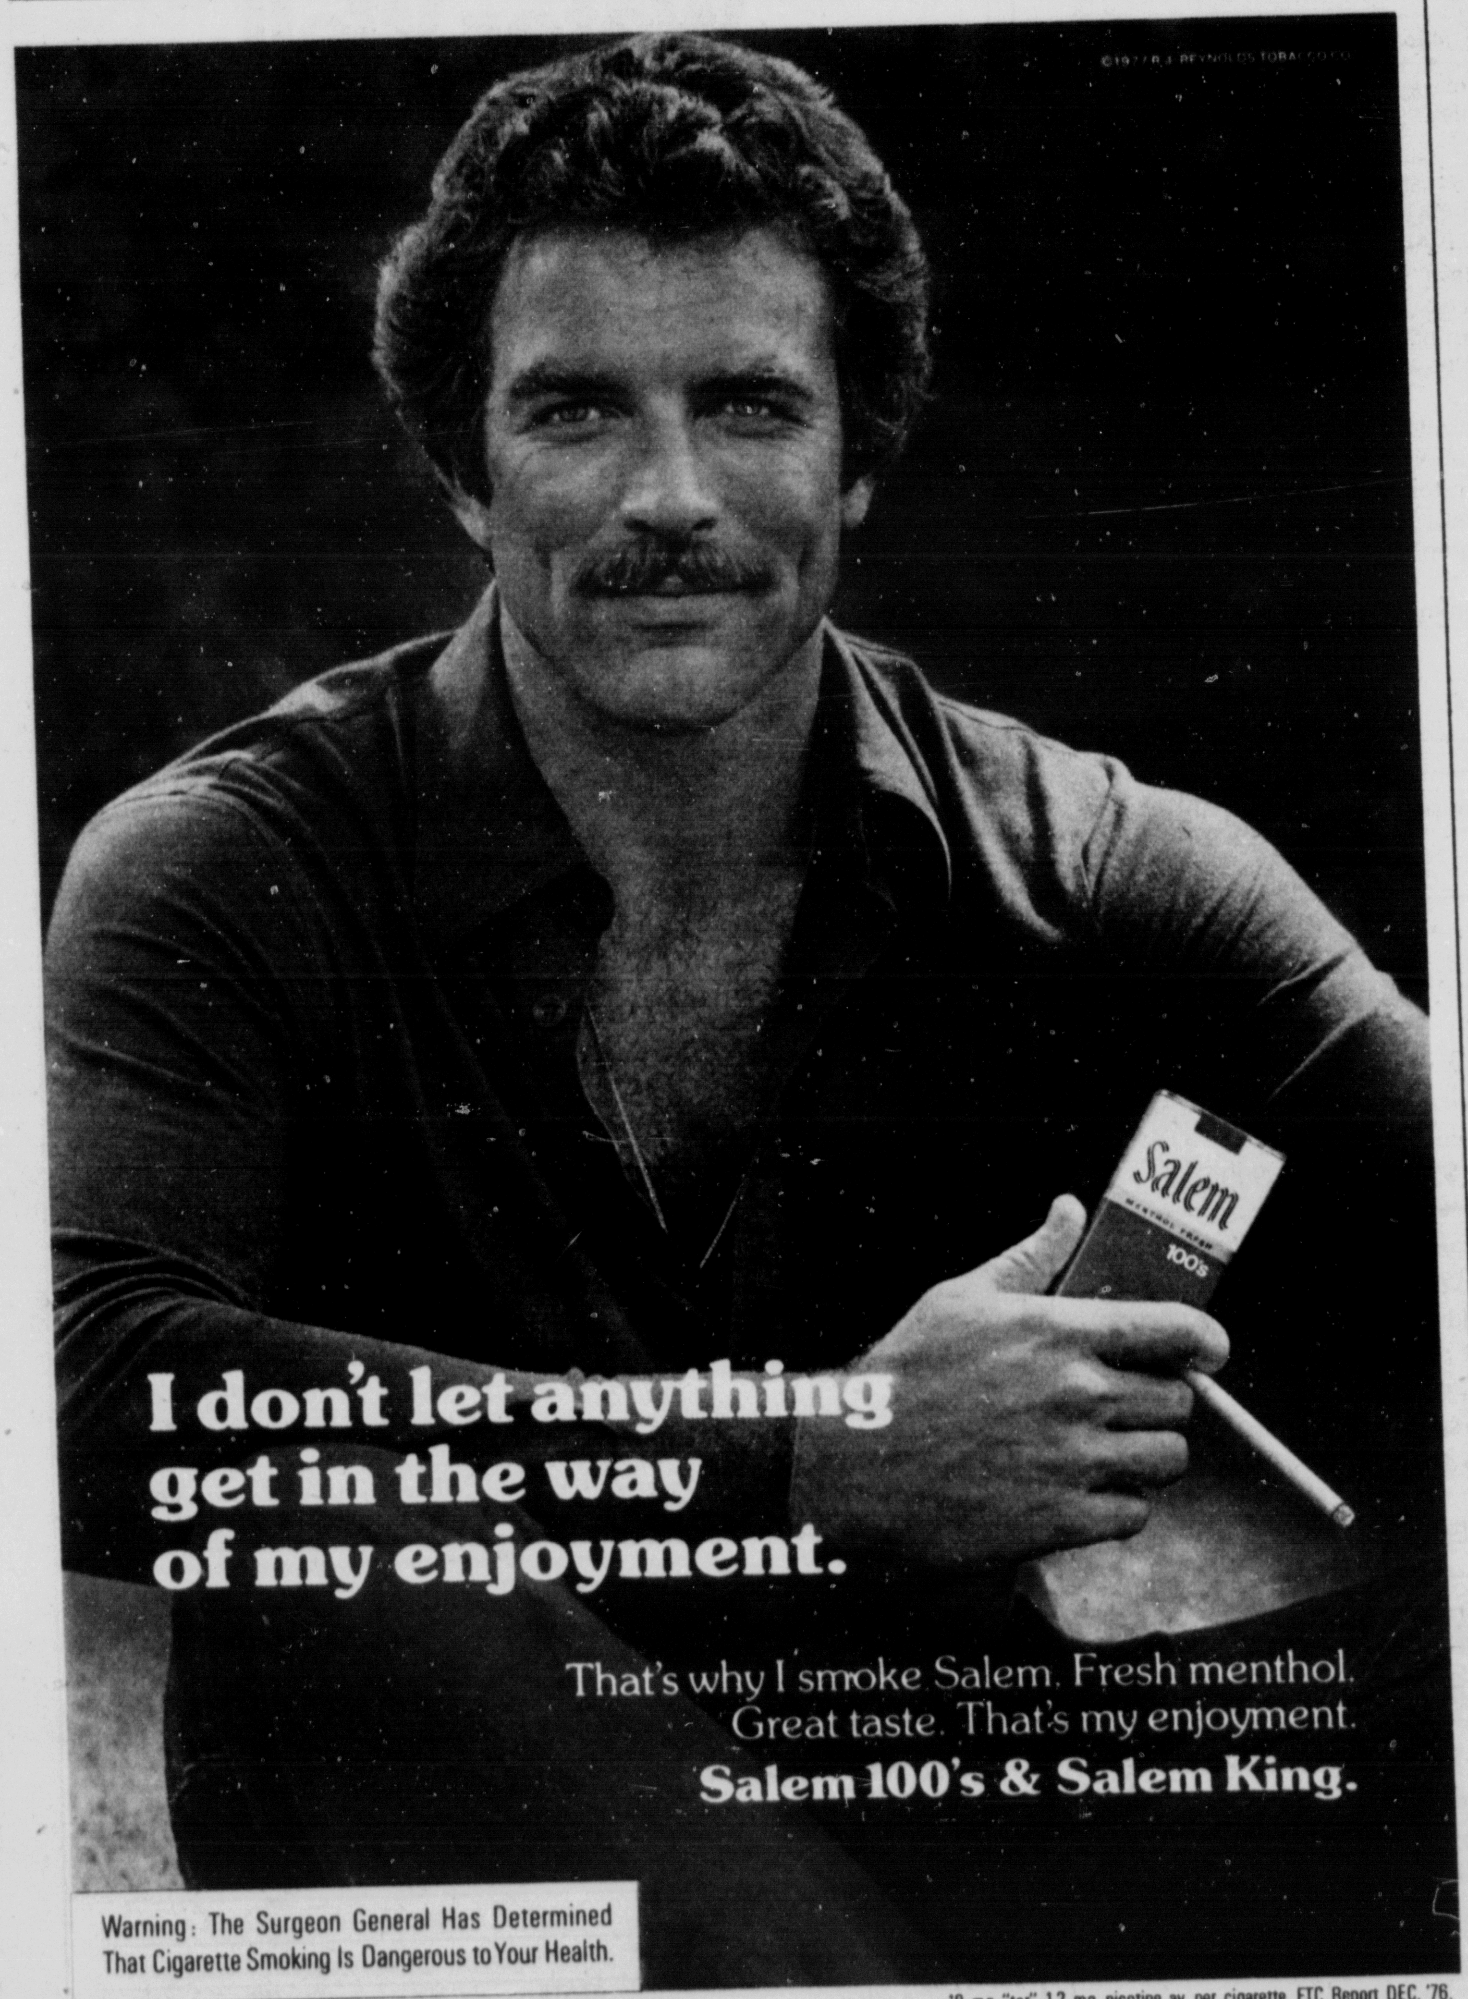
2. Cut bread diagonally at ¾-inch intervals almost to bottom crust; spread seasoned butter between slices. Place loaf in center of lightly buttered heavy-duty aluminum foil.

3. Bring the two long sides of foil together above bread; fold down loosely in a series of locked folds.

4. Grill on rack over medium-hot coals, turning frequently, about 20 minutes or until butter melts.

Makes 12 to 14 slices

SUPER EASY:
Thread 1½-inch chunks of unpeeled eggplant or zucchini on skewers. Brush with any oil and vinegar salad dressing. Grill, 4 or 5 inches from hot coals, turning and basting with salad dressing until lightly browned and tender, about 3 to 4 minutes per side. Great with grilled meats or chicken.



PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

Does the importance of clothes to you depend on where you're from? Is feedback from others related to apparel?

HOW THE WAY YOU DRESS AFFECTS YOUR LIFE

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The feedback you get from others depends largely on the clothes you're wearing.

2. The clothes a woman puts on in the morning can affect the way she feels all day.

3. The way women dress provides a clue to their attitudes toward romantic relationships.

4. How important clothes are in your life depends on where you're from and who you know.

5. Your attitude toward clothes reveals a lot about you.

6. How a woman's attire is regarded depends to a large extent on how pleasing her face is to look at.

ANSWERS

1. True. This is particularly the case with casual acquaintances. Psychological studies at Smith College, for example, show that, in general, people are more likely to be honest and straightforward with you if you are well dressed than if you are not. Studies at Wellesley College indicate that people are much more helpful — giving directions, providing assistance in a troublesome situation, for example — when the person seeking help is attractively attired. Finally, University of New Mexico investigators evaluated public reactions to the conduct of more than 300 men and women students attired in high- or low-status clothing. The study found that most people were much more likely to overlook censurable or "out-of-line" conduct, social slights and inconsiderate behavior with the better-dressed (high-status appearance) subjects.

2. True. A team of University of Newcastle (New South Wales) behavioral scientists made a study of women, randomly selected from three age groups: 16-20 years, 21-30 years, 31-45 years. All were questioned in depth as to the extent their moods were influenced by the clothes they were wearing. Ninety-seven percent of the youngest group indicated that what they decided to wear tended to make or break their day. Seventy-seven percent of the next age group and 70 percent of the older group said they were similarly affected by the clothes they were wearing. ("I always feel great when I wear this outfit." "I wear this dress when I have a crisis to face. It always sees me through." "This is what I call my bittersweet dress. It makes me feel like a tragic heroine," etc.)

3. True. A Western Illinois University study entitled Clothing as a Nonverbal Communicator of Attitudes and Behavior showed that clothing is not a valid clue to men's relationships with the opposite sex. For women, however, it was found that preference for more revealing styles and fashions tended to go hand in hand with liberal attitudes toward social behavior.

4. True. In her treatise on clothing and human behavior, research scientist Mary Shaw Ryan found that "the importance placed upon clothing varies with the size of the subject's home town. Those from large cities consider clothes more important than do those from small towns." In addition, the more money and social prestige people possess the more importance they tend to assign to clothes and the more their judgments are likely to be affected by them. This was not found to be true, however, for those in the very highest social and economic brackets; these people are well established and socially secure and thus do not feel the need to demonstrate their position through possessions.

5. True. Studies conducted at the University of Saskatchewan (Canada) revealed that people who were satisfied with their clothes (felt comfortable in them and thought they looked good in them) tended to be outgoing and happy and to cope well with social relationships. On the other hand, people who expressed chronic dissatisfaction with their wardrobes frequently had less self-assurance. A further finding: People who were extremely preoccupied with clothes — who exaggerated the importance of style and fashion — tended to be less well adjusted and "were seen by their peers as merely 'trying to impress.'"

6. True. In studies conducted by a team of University of Alberta (Canada) behavioral scientists, students were asked to judge the overall appearance of women attired in a number of different styles and fashions. Each was characterized by various degrees of facial attractiveness, such as a pleasant or unpleasant expression. It was found that regardless of what each subject wore, facial appearance was the significant factor in determining how well each was judged to look.

TURNS UGLY FAT INTO HARMLESS WATER

And FLOWS It Right Out Of Your Body —FOREVER!

It's true! Now — without risking a single penny — IN ONE WEEKEND you lose up to 6 pounds of ugly fat and fluid! IN 14 SHORT DAYS — up to 12 pounds of excess weight flows right out of your thighs, hips, stomach, shoulders, face and neck — yes, all over your body! IN EXACTLY THOSE SAME 2 ASTOUNDING WEEKS — inches of flab that you can actually feel and measure — gallop right off your waistline!

But this is just the beginning! Because then — thanks to this amazing ACTIVE reducing agent that actually helps your body oxidize fat . . . burn it up . . . liquify fat and flow it right out of your life by automatically and almost instantly WATER-LOCKING ravenous hunger pangs right out of your body — you will effortlessly eat less and go on to lose 20 . . . 30 . . . 40 pounds of ugly fat from every corner of your body — AND KEEP THAT FAT OFF YOUR BODY — FOREVER!

Yes! And best of all, as long as you faithfully and happily follow this road, you will accomplish all this without starvation diets, without a single ravenously hungry moment, without even giving up reasonable and enjoyable portions of the foods you love!

Of course it sounds too good to be true! But the principles behind this thrilling PERMANENT REDUCING PLAN have been confirmed by doctors all over the world. And now the very same method reported in medical journal after medical journal — is released to you through this announcement — to help you get rid of ugly excess fat faster, easier, and safer than you have ever dreamed possible!

You MUST be happy with the fantastic results — OR IT DOESN'T COST YOU A PENNY! You have nothing to lose but ugly fat. Read these thrilling facts! Prove it yourself — in 14 astounding days — OR PAY NOTHING!

Stop Punishing Yourself! Here's Why Those Pounds Never Stayed Off!

Let's start this way. You probably tried time and again to accomplish the job of reducing — BY YOURSELF! You spent week after week of torture. You pushed away the foods you love. And finally, if you could bear the punishment, you squeezed off 3, 5, or even 10 stubborn pounds.

And then your will power snapped! You stopped your brutal diet. Your fat dripped back — heavier, and uglier, and more dangerous than ever before!

AN ENTIRELY NEW KIND OF REDUCING AGENT WAS NEEDED BY YOU! An ACTIVE agent that would help conquer ugly fat at its source — OVEREATING! What simply had to be found was a Natural ingredient that would help YOUR BODY'S OWN NATURAL PROCESSES burn up and liquify that fat — quickly, easily, and safely. A Natural ingredient synthesized and automatically tied to a Permanent Plan that would once and forever hurdle the Final Two Barriers to Lifetime Slimness: firstly, by shielding the human body against the root cause of your present fat buildup — OVEREATING — and secondly, by LOCKING OUT future fat buildup — THE RETURN OF THAT RUNAWAY APPETITE — for the rest of your entire adult life! Actually keep those 20 . . . 30 . . . 40 pounds of extra fat from ever piling up on your body again — EVER!

Now! Nature Succeeds Where You Have Always Failed!

Researchers hunted for such a reducing agent for years. Then it was found — innocently hiding in the cell walls of ALL PRECIOUS PLANT LIFE! An amazing Natural ingredient called Cellulose — that actually possessed astounding WATER-BINDING qualities! Immediately, doctors knew that a whole new world had opened up to reducing science. Because here at last was the magic ingredient that would — by automatically eliminating the desire to overeat — inevitably let your body NATURALLY turn ugly fat into harmless water — and then FLOW THAT LIQUID FAT RIGHT OUT OF YOUR BODY! Now for the first time in your life, you could watch inch after inch and pound after pound of fluid fat drip right out of your body like water dripping out of a tap — WITHOUT TORTURE — WITHOUT SLIDING BACK!

Let me explain. Your own doctor will tell you that the fat inside your body is distributed, in massive globs, in FAT STORAGE POCKETS underneath your skin. You can touch these pockets yourself — at your waistline, on your stomach, your thighs, behind your hips, on your shoulders, chest and chin — disfiguring your entire body!

And if you honestly want to reduce all over your body, then you have to attack all of these fat pockets at the same time! You have to drain the ugly fat out of those pockets . . . into your blood stream . . . so it can be burned up and LIQUIFIED inside your body.

And — now — this is exactly what WATER-BINDING Cellulose helps your body do! It actually helps LIQUIFY that fat every minute of the day. While you sleep. While you eat. While you play. It helps turn that solid fat into liquid inside your body . . . it helps your body melt down ugly fat into harmless water . . . and then it helps flow that water right out of your body — FOREVER!

Think of it! Because of its natural WATER-BINDING qualities, this Wonder Worker duplicated from Nature's Plant Garden — when taken with a glass of water just as naturally as washing down your daily vitamin pill with water — actually BINDS AND BLENDS with that water to give your stomach a feeling of almost impossible-to-believe satisfaction! That's why WATER-BINDING Cellulose now is used wherever the special need exists to provide overweight men and women with APPETITE SATISFACTION WITHOUT CALORIES . . . wherever the special need exists to CONQUER RUNAWAY HUNGER — FOREVER!

Yes! No wonder WATER-BINDING Cellulose is now used by the Diet Drinks industry to add the "feeling" of body to those drinks WITHOUT ADDING CALORIES! By the Diet Foods Industry because it binds with the moisture in those foods to give you an incomparable "feeling" of FULLNESS AND SATISFACTION — WITHOUT CALORIES! By the Bread Industry because it binds with the moisture in those loaves to increase the "feeling" of volume in those breads — WITHOUT ADDING MORE FATTENING DOUGH — WITHOUT ADDING CALORIES!

Lose Up to 20, 30, Even 40 Pounds — FOREVER!

It's true! Reducing results should be fantastic. You will NOT give up on the foods you love — you will only have that amazing satisfied feeling that lets you simply and naturally cut down on them. You will NOT be on a starvation diet — and obviously, you will never experience a single moment of ravenous hunger!

While you are feasting on perfectly reasonable portions of mouth-watering steaks, thick juicy slices of roast beef, potatoes, butter and bread — you should lose inch after inch of fat from your waist, thighs, hips — all over your body! Clothes you had given up on forever, should begin to come out of closets again!

Yes! IN ONE WEEKEND you will lose up to 6 pounds of ugly fat and fluid! IN 14 SHORT DAYS — up to 12 pounds of excess weight flows right out of your thighs, hips, stomach, shoulders, face and neck — yes, all over your body! IN EXACTLY THOSE SAME 2 ASTOUNDING WEEKS — inches of flab that you can actually feel and measure — gallop right off your waistline! And then you will go on from there to lose 20 . . . 30 . . . 40 pounds of extra fat from every corner of your body — AND KEEP THAT FAT OFF FOREVER! Because from now on, for as long as you faithfully and happily follow this road, you have an active, natural, fat-fighter automatically tied to a foolproof Lifetime Plan that, together, will actually help keep that ugly fat from forming on your body ever again! Actually keep it off — FOR THE REST OF YOUR ENTIRE ADULT LIFE!

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

The district attorney was cross-examining the defendant. "And after you had poisoned the coffee and your husband sat at the table partaking of the fatal dosage, didn't you feel the slightest qualms? Didn't you feel the slightest pity for him?"

"Yes, I did for a moment."

"When was that?"

"When he asked for a second cup." —Conrad Fiorello

A dog has so many friends because he wags his tail instead of his tongue. —Tom LaMance

CARPET BRAGGER

Our carpeting is wall-to-wall
In every room — well, not quite all.
Our kitchen floor is carpetless,
And that is just as well, I guess.
If it were carpeted, just think
Of drippings dripping from the sink
As well as from the stove aglow —
Pans sizzle there, pots overflow.
But if our barren kitchen floor
Were carpeted from door to door,
I'd pick a carpet whose design
Would serve the purpose really fine,
With dots and splotches mod and mad, too,
That day by day we'd simply add to. —Richard Armour

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

The other day my 4-year-old son appeared at my neighbor's. "Mummy gave me permission to come," he announced. "You have a nice Mummy," my neighbor said. "Yes," he replied, "but she is getting old."

MONEY

How To Become Your Own Economics Expert

Business people and stock-market investors are not the only ones who can benefit from a careful reading of the financial section in a newspaper or magazine. Nuggets of information are often there that can save an alert consumer a good deal of money.

Not long ago, for example, the business pages reported that the International Trade Commission, an agency of the U.S. Government, had recommended a 15-percent increase in the import duty levied on foreign-made color television sets. The previous tax was 5 percent. A simple calculation showed that the new tax could add as much as $75 to the price of an imported color TV. If you were planning to buy such a set, you could have saved that amount by making your purchase before the higher tax was scheduled to go into effect.

In recent months similar tax increases were recommended for imported shoes and for some textile goods — hints to the bargain-conscious consumer to buy before prices rise. Quota restrictions on imported items also forecast higher retail prices. The quotas are designed to limit supplies (thus protecting American producers), but limited supplies eventually mean higher costs.

Similarly, when commodity traders bid up the prices for future deliveries of such items as grains, precious metals or food crops, it's often a sign of higher retail prices to come. A news item reporting increases in the cost of raw materials can alert you to possible higher costs for finished products that use such materials.

Being your own economic forecaster is often nothing more than reading business news carefully, and then using common sense to figure out what the data will mean. —Norman Lobsenz

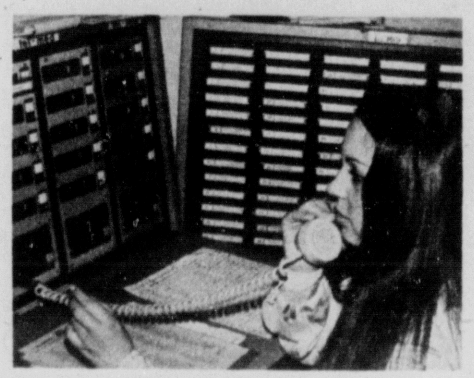
WHAT IN THE WORLD...

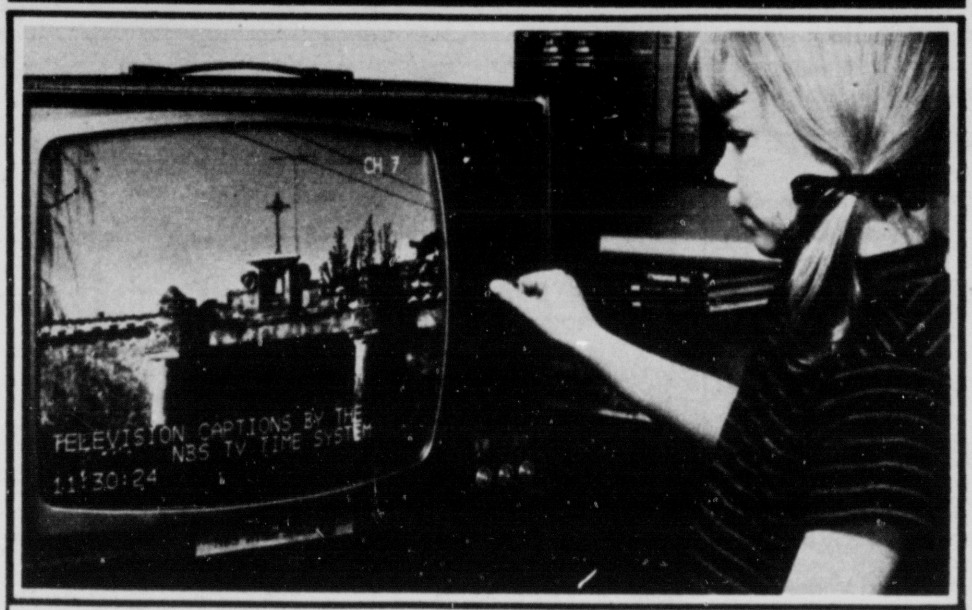


Dial-A-Doctor

You can get doctor-approved information on 300 medical topics with just a phone call through Tel Med, a nonprofit service now available in more than 90 cities. Tel Med was started in 1972 by the San Bernardino (Calif.) County Medical Society and is now sponsored nationwide by organizations including hospitals, Blue Cross plans and county medical societies. Sponsors say the service is designed to provide information to help people recognize early signs of illness and to keep them healthy. The 3- to 7-minute tapes (200 of which are available in Spanish) cover everything from childhood illnesses to venereal disease. To find out whether a Tel Med number is in your area, or to request a list of tapes, contact your local county medical society. If it doesn't have the information, write Tel Med Inc., 22700 Cooley Dr., Colton, Calif. 92324.

Pleasant Dreams!

Feel as if you crawled out of the wrong side of bed this morning? It might be due to something you dreamt, says Dr. Milton Kramer, a psychiatrist at the Univ. of Cincinnati College of Medicine. Kramer, who has been studying the relation between sleep and moods for 7 years along with Dr. Thomas Roth, says that the biggest influence on how happy we feel in the morning is who appears in our dreams rather than what happens in them. He says the more people in the dream the better we feel, and that each of us has a certain kind of character whose appearance makes us happier. Kramer's work may have therapeutic applications — he and Roth have already discovered that the mentally ill often dream about different types of characters than other people. After further studies, therapists might be able to help people feel better by influencing their dream content.



Deaf May "Hear" TV Programs

Several million deaf Americans will be able to see captioned television programs at the same time others watch the uncaptioned programs, thanks to a new technological development. The closed-caption system has already been tested at 13 locations around the country, says Mrs. Loretta Cubberley of PBS, which helped to develop the system. The system should be available to the public within 2 years and will cost approximately $100. In the meantime, Mrs. Cubberley says that 256 PBS stations currently run about 10 hours of captioned programming per week. To find out what is available in your area, contact your local public broadcasting station. If you'd like more information on the captioning system, write Mrs. Cubberly at: PBS, 475 L'Enfant Plaza, Washington, D.C. 20024.

How To Save Your Dog's Life

Mosquitoes may be just a summer annoyance to you, but they can kill your dog. Veterinarians across the country are seeing a dramatic increase in heartworm, a life-threatening but preventable infection of dogs that is carried by mosquitoes. Once confined to the warm Southeastern coastal regions, heartworm now has spread to other parts of the country. Dr. Lawrence Tilley, a staff cardiologist at New York City's Animal Medical Center, warns that most infected dogs won't show any symptoms until the disease is very advanced, so prevention is the best medicine. To safeguard your pet, Dr. Tilley advises:

- Check with your vet to see if you live in an area where your dog runs a risk of infection.
- If so, have your dog tested to see if it is infected.
- If the dog is not infected, it can be protected by being fed a daily tablet (diethylcarbamazine) that your vet will give you. The medication costs 5¢ a day for a poodle, up to 12¢ for a shepherd.
- Only uninfected dogs can be given the preventive medicine. If your dog already has heartworm, the vet will treat him with a drug to kill the worms. If the disease is caught early enough, the success rate is high.

What's Your Fire Plan?

"What you do in the first 10 seconds after you discover a fire can make the difference between life and death," says Howard Owen, fire commissioner of Baltimore, Md. Owen urges all families to work out a primary plan of escape with at least one alternate escape route for each person. He also says it's important to have a predetermined gathering place to meet after you've escaped to make sure everyone is safe. Call the fire department — but only after you've escaped. And never try to put out a fire yourself. To gain precious seconds, Owen recommends buying a smoke detector. He advises selecting a detector that has the Underwriters Laboratory (UL) seal, and one that is battery-operated so that it will work if the electrical current goes off because of the fire.

Quick Takes

Dieting may not always trim your waistline, but it will lighten your wallet says a Hofstra Univ. sociologist who reports that Americans spend $1.4 billion a year trying to lose weight. Weight-watchers spend a billion dollars on diet food, books and literature and $220 million a year at health spas and weight-reducing salons....Washington journalists rate the postal service third class. The 57 Washington press corps members surveyed by Washington Researchers, an independent information service, said that the U.S. Postal Service gives the worst information of any Federal agency. The journalists gave high marks to the Dept. of the Interior and the Environmental Protection Agency....The Dept. of Labor says that the automobile industry is the largest employer in the U.S., employing 851,000 people last year. Runner-up was the steel industry, with 543,000 workers....If you think you've been hearing more people speaking foreign languages lately, you're right. The U.S. Travel Service says we can expect a record 5 million foreign visitors (not counting Canadians and Mexicans) this year, a 14% increase over the number of Bicentennial tourists.

Roadside Attraction

Billboards may soon become a treat for the sore eyes of weary travelers. The Oregon Arts Commission, the Visual Arts Resources at the University of Oregon Museum of Art and the National Endowment for the arts are cosponsoring a statewide billboard design competition to select four designs that will be reproduced on 100 roadside billboards by the end of the summer. "We thought billboards would be ideal spaces to put art to reach people who never go to a museum," says Michael Whitenack, director of Visual Arts Resources. Plans are underway to expand the competition to other Western states next summer.
